GIRL BARES EBELL'S DEATH

Today

Quite Easily Said
Earth's New Motion
We Ship Gold. What Next?
All Roll Over

—By ARTHUR BRISBANE—

The big steel companies talk of abandoning the NRA code altogether, fearing the consequences of putting their industry absolutely in the control of organized labor.

"More easily said than done," they will be told. An old horse mired in a swamp might talk about "abandoning the leeches that cling to him," but the leeches would cling. American industry must go all the way through the process of being managed by those that never successfully managed anything else before. Maybe the experiment will lead to the millennium, maybe not. All must hope and co-operate, even the mired horse.

Mr. Green, head of the American Federation of Labor, urges unions to drive "the Reds" from their ranks by expelling all Communist members. Mr. Green demands that labor "make war upon Communism." That will please some frightened "best minds."

Perhaps Mr. Green will add a demand that racketeering methods be also driven from some unions. He can learn from business men how welcome that move would be. It would, however, reduce the earnings of some important "leaders."

One item in the day's news will be news forever, or as long as men live here. Dr. R. F. Sanford, California scientist, of Pasadena, has discovered and can prove that the earth has a fourth important motion, added to the three with which you are familiar: the first, turning every 24 hours on its axis; the second, traveling around the sun, once in 365 days, in an ellipse; the third, traveling with the sun, on its mysterious journey through space, toward the constellation of Lyra. That third motion, like that of a calf walking around its mother, as the mother walks across the pasture, is a spiral motion.

To the three principal and universally known motions, Dr. Sanford adds a fourth, caused by the sun swinging in a great circle around the center of our galaxy, or "milky way." In that fourth great movement, the earth, compelled to accompany the sun wherever it goes, swings through space at a speed of one hundred and fifty miles per second. The earth turns on its axis about one thousand miles an hour, travels around the sun about nineteen miles a second, or 68,400 miles an hour. The sun drags us through space, toward Lyra, at twelve miles a second. The "big swing" around the central point of our galactic system is made at a speed of 540,000 miles an hour.

Even that is not all. The earth has all sorts of queer little motions of its own and it has a fifth principal motion, traveling with our sun, and the millions of other suns in the milky way, as our little "universe" travels around some distant unknown central point in space.

We know that the nebulae, or "outside island universes," in space are all in motion—astronomers actually see them moving—and, of course, our star-city, called the "galaxy," moves, as do the other nebulae. Nothing stands still in the universe.

It is pleasing to know that Mount Wilson Observatory makes its sidereal calculations of speed and motion "with the aid of 146 cool red stars, scattered about the sun at distances which average about 2000 light years (or 12,000,000,000,000,000 miles).

It's a big universe, and in it 2000 light years or 12 quadrillions of miles represent a small distance. There are nebulae distant one billion light years from our planet. You can figure that in miles, multiplying by 186,000 the number of seconds in one thousand million years.

Anyone not interested in these fourth and fifth motions of the earth and the size of the universe should join Plato's men, sitting in his famous cave, facing the wall, their backs to the light.

Lloyd George, in his memoirs, says that while England was borrowing American dollars so industriously, the "United States, shocked by the cost of war, was suspicious, as the Allies asked for credit."

He does not add, as he might, that Americans would have been wise to refuse the credit, since all of "our gallant Allies" have

By ALFRED D. WHELTON
Boston Evening American Staff Correspondent

Norwich, Conn., Aug. 20—In a girl's camp where tragedy stalked suddenly to crush down laughter and gayety, a coroner sought out witnesses today, while Helen Alice Ebell, nine, innocent pawn in the drama, waited uncomfortably to testify against her mother before a coroner's jury.

Helen, one of the girl campers, was an eyewitness to the battle on Saturday, in which her father, Hans Ebell, musician and composer of Brookline, Mass., allegedly was killed by her divorced mother's suitor as the mother was spiriting the girl away.

Inquest into the death was delayed until this afternoon while Coroner Edward G. McKay quizzed witnesses at the camp.

WIFE, FRIEND HELD

Meanwhile the mother, Mrs. Helen Alice Ebell of Center street, Brookline, and Louis Goldsmith, 37, of Howland street, Roxbury, former Brookline drugstore manager, are being held incommunicado, awaiting outcome of the inquest.

Goldsmith is accused of striking the blows which killed the musician. Mrs. Ebell is held in $10,000 bonds as an alleged accessory after the fact.

Held in Pianist's Death

Mrs. Helen Alice Ebell, above, of Center street, Brookline, and Louis Goldsmith, of Howland street, Roxbury, faced a coroner's jury at Norwich, Conn., as an inquest opened into the death of the woman's husband, Hans Ebell, Brookline musician and composer. Police claim that Goldsmith struck Ebell in the face in an attempt to dislodge him from his auto following an argument over the removal of the Ebells' daughter, Helen, nine, from a summer camp. Driver Hurt in Odd Accident

Furber was injured when he was pinned between his truck, which he was unloading on Hanover street, near Elm, and a parked car.

Frank King, of Oxford street, Somerville, according to police, lost control of a car he was operating, crashed into a parked car, which pinned Furber to the side of his truck.

FORD TO SPEND $10,000,000

By International News Service

Detroit, Aug. 20—A $10,000,000 expansion program in its River Rouge plant, at Dearborn, was announced today by the Ford Motor Company.

The expansion will take place in the next ten months.

Contracts have been signed by Henry Ford, according to an announcement by the company, for one of the largest capital improvements made by any industrial concern in this country in recent years.

Five and a half millions of the outlay will be used to double the power capacity of the Dearborn plant by purchase of new generators, boilers and auxiliary equipment. The rest of the money will be expended in iron and coal mine operations and installation of auxiliary machinery.

Mill Strike Plans Mapped Out by Leaders in R. I.

With Rhode Island's mill hands already on record as favoring the cotton textiles strike planned for September 1, Joseph Sylvia, general organizer of the United Textile Workers of America, arrived in Pawtucket today, and began plans for conferences, at which details are to be worked out.

Sylvia will be the "brains" behind theh strike in New England, where it is expected to affect at least 173,000 workers. It may reduce 500,000 men and women in the cotton industry, and 325,000 in the textile fields, to idleness throughout the nation.

FIRST TO ORGANIZE

Because the Rhode Island Textile Council voted endorsement of the U. T. W. A. convention's strike vote at a special meeting yesterday, Sylvia said that it would be the first group to be organized for the walk-out. He has called a meeting of the officers and delegates of its 52 unions for Providence next Saturday.

He also plans to meet representatives of the Massachusetts Textile Council on the same day. The place of the meeting will not be announced until he has conferred with some of them by telephone. He plans to do this late today or tomorrow.

PLANS MAPPED OUT

Willimatic has been selected as the scene of the Connecticut meeting. And the date has been set as next Sunday, Sylvia said. Meetings of the Maine, New Hampshire and Vermont councils are to be called tomorrow.

Strike strategy and tactics are to be planned at these sessions,

GIRL GIVES LIFE FOR HER BROTHER

Attempting to rescue her five-year-old brother, Thomas, Mary Durante, 13, of 117 Mercer street South Boston, was drowned today off Carson Beach after a home-made boat capsized.

While hundreds watched, Lifeguard John Mahoney, son of Police Lieutenant George Mahoney, recovered the boy in time to revive him, but the girl's body could not be located.

The boy was hurried to Carney Hospital by Julia Spagnolette, of 997 Parker street, Jamaica Plain, who was passing the beach in her car at the time.

Mahoney dove repeatedly for the courageous sister of the rescued boy and was joined by coast guards, harbor police and four park department boats. Grappling irons were used.

The mother of the two children was called to the scene by friends and stood in tears among the 1500 bathers that witnessed the tragedy and the dragging.

The boat of the Durante children—made out of packing boxes and old lumber—turned over just off the foot of G street.

Residents of Dorchester in the vicinity of 170 Granite street today lost their battle to prevent Samuel A. Myers from keeping, storing and selling 60,000 gallons of fuel and range oil in addition to a present quantity stored at the rear of that address.

About 200 Dorchesterites, led by Joseph T. Murphy, had appealed to the state fire marshal from the decision of the Boston street commissioners in granting the license. Today Fire Marshal Stephen C. Garrity dismissed the petition.

HITLER VOTED LIFE JOB AS 'CAESAR'

By H. R. KNICKERBOCKER
International News Service Staff Correspondent

World Copyright, 1934, International News Service. Reproduction in whole or in part prohibited.

Berlin, Aug. 20—Adolf Hitler today entered into a lifetime job as Germany's Caesar. Over 38,000,000 Germans willingly or unwillingly, freely or not, told him, "Yes, we want you to be our autocrat from now on." Fewer than 5,000,000 took a chance and voted no. So Hitler has a permanent commission from the German people.

German democracy which committed suicide when Hitler moved into the chancellor's office in January, 1933, has now buried itself. Each year, Hitler has promised to submit his policies to plebiscite but never again will he submit his person to popular approval and nothing can be foreseen now that could happen to break his iron hold on power except death or war.

The final figures were released by the government today as "Yes," 38,363,760; "No," 4,294,754; invalid, 872,296.

The official announcement of the Nazi party said:

"The result was an overwhelming confession of confidence on the part of the German people in its leader, Hitler. Ninety per cent stood unreservedly behind one man. History knows no ex-

DUCE MARCHES WITH TROOPS

By Associated Press

Scarperia del Mugello, Italy, Aug. 20—Premier Benito Mussolini, who is also Minister of War, leaped from his automobile today and set out afoot with his troops, engaged in war maneuvers.

He had been following them in his trim little roadster, he serving as his own chauffeur, but he abandoned the car when the soldiers struck out across a rough terrain which the car was unable to negotiate.

Il Duce marched along for hours.

King Victor Emmanuel came up with another detachment of troops from another direction, and the two leaders of Italy met in the middle of a "battlefield."

The two greeted each other, then engaged into a long talk.

Miss Franklin's husband, Jerry Jarnagan, composer and pianist, was found shot to death in the living room of the residence a scant 12 feet across a flower-decorated patio from where Miss Franklin and three guests were preparing to dine.

MURDER ANGLE PROBED

Detectives studied two theories—murder or suicide.

"We are not at all satisfied with any theory of suicide," declared Bert H. J. Wallis, captain of detectives.

While Miss Franklin and her guests laughed and joked at a pre-nuptial feast for Jarnagan's niece, Miss Dorothy Watson, Jarnagin excused himself, saying.

He left the room.

HELP CALLED FROM TWO TOWNS

Plymouth, N. H., Aug. 20—Sixty guests were forced to flee today when fire destroyed the west wing of the Pemigewasset House, the largest summer hotel in Plymouth.

Fire broke out while a majority of the guests were breakfasting. Help was called from Ashland and Laconia to fight the flames.

The cause was undetermined. Loss was $50,000, according to Manager J. Harold Blackey.

Hotel employes, under direction of Blackey, raced through the hotel to be sure all guests were out. They were successful in saving the luggage as well. The guests went to other hotels and private homes. The east wing, damaged slightly by water, will be ready for occupancy in a day or so.

The hotel, a wooden structure, has 100 rooms, which had been filled to capacity over the week-end, but many had left by motor shortly before the fire broke out.

Society Women Tote Clubs as Caddies Quit

Mrs. Stephen van R. Crosby of Beacon street, sister-in-law of J. P. Morgan, the financier, and Miss Susan Sturgis of Commonwealth avenue, her cousin, had an experience with strikers at Manchester-by-the-Sea today.

Playing golf at the Essex County Club, they were forced to carry their own clubs after 50 striking caddies drove their caddy away.

Mrs. Crosby and Miss Sturgis had reached the fifth tee with a volunteer caddy when the group of strikers approached, explained to the social registerites that there was a strike and ordered the volunteer to quit.

The volunteer tried to talk the group into permitting him to continue but he was refused and he finally walked away. The women looked at the heavy bags, laughed, picked them up and continued on with their round.

The strike started Sunday, when 100 caddies walked off after being refused $1 instead of 80 cents per round of 18 holes.

EBELL DAUGHTER TO TELL JURY OF FATHER'S ARGUMENT

By ALFRED D. WHELTON

AUTO FIGHT CITED

Medical Examiner Donohue turned his autopsy findings over to Coroner McKay, who immediately ordered Mrs. Ebell and Goldsmith held pending the results of the inquest.

According to police, Goldsmith struck Ebell in the face in an attempt to dislodge the musician from the running board of the automobile in which Alice was being taken from the camp by her mother over his protests.

The child, who will tell of the argument between her estranged parents, was brought here last night from the Providence General Hospital, where she was placed for treatment for a cold after her mother and Goldsmith had been arrested by the Providence police Saturday night.

"MAD WITH DADDY"

Wrapped in a heavy hospital blanket, thrown over her light summer clothing, the little girl was taken immediately to police headquarters, where she was questioned by Coroner McKay and state police officials.

Coroner McKay declined to reveal anything the child told him, but it was learned from an official source that she declared:

"Mr. Goldsmith was awfully mad with my daddy. They had a long argument."

Immediately after they had concluded their questioning of the child, police took Helen to her maternal grandmother, Mrs. Agnes Castle, who came here to be at her daughter's side.

Coroner McKay revealed that he has questioned a young woman counselor at the girl's camp who declared she saw Goldsmith strike Ebell in the face in an attempt to dislodge him from the running board of the automobile.

WOMAN'S NAME GUARDED

The identity of the young woman counselor was being closely guarded by police. Her unexpected testimony was given to Coroner McKay several hours after Medical Examiner Donohue and Dr. Maurice R. Moore, a Gales Ferry pathologist, declared that the musician received a blow on the right cheek which caused the brain injury in the left ear area.

Milo Light, director of the girls' camp at Gardner Lakes, brought the woman counselor to police headquarters after she had told him of the events she witnessed Saturday night.

Light told police that Mrs. Ebell and Goldsmith arrived at the camp at 6 o'clock Saturday night and refused to sign the visitors' register as required by camp regulations.

Light said:

"Mrs. Ebell told me that she had permission to take Helen away. I, knowing what I did of the difficulties between Mr. and Mrs. Ebell, told her that I doubted it and they left to go to the boarding house where Mr. Ebell was staying.

"They returned and said that Mr. Ebell had given her permission to take the child. I told her I still doubted it and refused to allow her to take the child.

LEAPS ON AUTO

"In a few moments, Mr. Ebell came to the camp and they went into a cabin. They hung Turkish towels over the wire netting so we could not see inside. In a few minutes Mrs. Ebell came out and went to the house where Helen Alice was living. She came out with the child, who was dressed in her pajamas, and put her in the car, between herself and Goldsmith.

"The car started up and Mr. Ebell jumped on the running board. Then something happened that I did not see and Mr. Ebell fell to the ground. The car raced toward me at a high speed. I held up my hand as if to stop them or slow them down, but the car continued at me. I jumped into some bushes at the side of the road to avoid being struck.

"We put Mr. Ebell on a cot and summoned medical aid. Dr. Gildersleeve, of Norwich, pronounced him dead. One of my counselors, who says she saw Goldsmith strike Mr. Ebell, has told her story to the police."

Goldsmith has denied that he struck a death dealing blow.

Mrs. Ebell told police that her divorced husband grabbed the steering wheel and caused the car to swerve dangerously to the side of the road. Goldsmith pushed him away in self-defense, she told police.

Coroner McKay has in his possession letters written by Mrs. Ebell to her husband and the couple's two children, Helen Alice and Frank, criticising his ability to teach the children French.

BARED WEDDING PLANS

Light quoted the musician as saying that he knew that his former wife and Goldsmith were planning to marry, and that he was concerned for the welfare of his children. Mrs. Ebell was given custody of the children 11 months a year when she was granted a divorce in Suffolk County Probate Court, several years ago.

Both Goldsmith and Mrs. Ebell denied that they had planned to marry and stated that they were not engaged. Mrs. Agnes Castle, Mrs. Ebell's mother, also made a simlar denial. She said that Goldsmith had been a family friend for many years.

Attorney Josiah Greenstein, of New London, was retained today by Goldsmith's brothers—one a Roxbury physician—to represent him. Attorney Greenstein spent several hours in the New London County jail last night conferring with his client.

ORDERED TO JAIL

Goldsmith and Mrs. Ebell arrived here yesterday from Providence where they were apprehended following radio and teletype broadcasts sent out by the Connecticut state police.

Commitment papers, necessary before Goldsmith could be placed in the county jail, were issued by Judge Oscar Church in the parlor of his home under an atmosphere of typical New England rural hospitality and neighborliness.

Judge Church met the police officers and their prisoners at the door in his shirtsleeves and smoking his pipe. He invited them into the parlor of his home, where his daughter, Irma, sat cutting a dress pattern.

Goldsmith and Mrs. Ebell were taken to the jail immediately after the papers had been signed by the country judge. Mrs. Castle declared she was prepared to post the $10,000 bail necessary for her daughter's temporary freedom, but said she believed her daughter would be released at the conclusion of the inquest.

BURIAL PLAN DELAYED

Meanwhile, county officials were concerning themselves with the problem of Ebell's burial.

Mrs. Castle declared that she is willing to claim the body of her son-in-law and give it proper burial, but county officials would not release it to her.

Coroner McKay declared that he would not release Ebell's body until he had ascertained whether or not the musician had left a will expressing a desire for a particular burial ceremony.

As far as could be ascertained by officials, Ebell has no near relatives living in the United States. Questioning of his Brookline neighbors revealed that many of them believed that he was the son of an aristocratic Russian family and is believed to have two sisters and a niece living in Leningrad.

MUSICAL ROMANCE

Neighbors revealed that Ebell had lived a lonely life in his Radnor road, Brookline apartment, during the years following his divorce. They said he frequently spoke hopefully of a reconciliation with his wife. He closed his apartment on August 1 to go to Salem, Conn., with his children for the one month in the year during which he had custody under the terms of a court order.

The divorce in the Suffolk Probate court ended a pupil-teacher romance which began in a Boston music conservatory. Ebell was nationally known pianist and composer. His wife came to him as a pupil and during the years following their divorce she became a teacher with a studio in her parent's home in Center street, Brookline.

Hyde Park Girl Feared Suicide

While police continued to hunt Palma Rampino, 18, of Wilton street, Hyde Park, missing from home since Thursday, relatives today expressed fear that she had attempted suicide.

Ebell Started Music Career In Old St. Petersburg

Hans Ebell, for whose death his divorced wife and a Roxbury man are held, was born in St. Petersburg, Russia, and attended its famous Music School, as well as conservatories in France, Germany and Austria, studying under such masters as Josef Hoffman, Gowdowsky and Rachmaninoff.

He made a number of European concert tours and came to this country in 1914.

Teaching in New York at first, he came to Steinert Hall after a time. Later he taught at the Boston Conservatory under the late Agide Jacchia. Recently he was made a member of its artistic direction.

During his American concert tours he made it a practice to give prominence to the works of Boston composers on his programs.

He first met his wife when she went to the Conservatory for piano lessons. Their mutual love of music served to speed their romance. After their mariage they lived at 5 Radnor street, Brighton.

They were divorced 18 months ago, the mother obtaining custody of their children.

However, the father was allow to have them for a mon summer. It was for th that he had rented a camp.

For today Lewis asks the grand jury to indict 21-year-old Bobby Edwards for first degree murder for the slaying of Freda McKechnie

She was his neighborhood sweetheart and expectant mother of his child. She died in the waters of Harvey's lake last month so that he might marry the more cultured, more attractive Margaret Crain, East Aurora, N. Y. music teacher.

In view of the youthful mining engineer's alleged three confessions it is regarded as a foregone conclusion that an indictment will be returned not later than Wednesday of the coming week. The case then will be listed for trial probably on September 10.

District Attorney Lewis has declared repeatedly that he will press for the death verdict—and Lewis has had an unusually successful career as public prosecutor.

Edwards' attorneys, Leonard D. Morgan and John Phillips, are youthful and not widely experienced in criminal law.

Yesterday, his third Sunday in prison, Bobby Edwards, who is guarded constantly against suicide, drooped in deep melancholy.

He attended religious services as a matter of routine and spent the remainder of the day reading magazines.

MOTHER TO AID DRIVER'S BRIDE

By Associated Press

Manila, Aug. 20—The mother of Colletta Mulvihill, whose sunrise elopement and marriage to Thomas Creen, a truck driver, created a sensation in Pittsburgh, said here today she was ready to help her daughter obtain an annulment.

But, added Mrs. Thomas J. Mulvihill, divorced wife of the wealthy Pittsburgh oil man:

"Colletta will have to make her own decision in this matter. If she wants to live with Creen that's her affair."

The couple married Thursday morning in Wellsburg, W. Va.

Saying that her daughter is only 15, Mrs. Mulvihill stated here that she had planned to sail for the States within the next few days, but had changed her mind and now is awaiting word from Colletta.

Held in Father's Death

Mrs. Bernice "Billee" Beauchamp Pickrell, shown here in San Jose jail, probably will plead insanity when arraigned for the slaying of her father, Robert Beauchamp, 65, Gilroy, California, rancher, it was indicated. Friends pointed to her incarceration in a hospital for the insane two years ago as a possible basis for step in defense plans.

Munro Will Aid 'Doomed' Wife

In an effort to restore the use of her legs, Dr. Donald Munro, noted City Hospital specialist, will operate on Mrs. Tillie Ceci, 33, North End mother of three children.

Mrs. Ceci was shot and seriously wounded on August 2, by Rocco "Dundee" Lombardo, an unwelcome suitor. Lombardo later committed suicide.

The bullets lodged in Mrs. Ceci's lower spine causing her to suffer paralysis which may make her bedridden the rest of her life.

ROOSEVELT TO ATTEND RITES FOR RAINEY

By Associated Press

Washington, Aug. 20—President Roosevelt probably will attend the funeral of Henry T. Rainey, late speaker of the House, if funeral arrangements are such as to permit him to elave Washington.

Leaders Mourn Sudden Death of Rainey

By Associated Press

St. Louis, Aug. 20—Henry T. Rainey, picturesque speaker of the House of Representatives, is dead.

Apparently on the road to recovery from an attack of bronchial pneumonia, he suddenly developed angina pectoris last night and died at 7:50 p. m., as three physicians, hastily sumoned, stood by, unable to aid him. Today would have been his seventy-fourth birthday.

The speaker's unexpected passing brought expressions of deep sorrow from political leaders in all parts of the nation—from President Roosevelt on down. The President called him:

"A humanitarian whose fine patriotism thought first of all of what he conceived to be the well being and interests of the common man."

While physicians at De Paul Hospital, where the Speaker died, believed he was on the road to recovery, Mrs. Rainey had a premonition of her husband's death.

Funeral arrangements probably will be completed today when Senator Dieterich goes to Carrollton to confer with Mrs. Rainey.

McCormack Considered as Next Speaker

By Associated Press

Washington, Aug. 20—The flag flew at half staff above the Capitol today as Washington sorrowed over Henry T. Rainey and wondered who would fill his powerful post.

With the Democrats already virtually assured of a majority, indications are that the speakership will lie among Representatives Joseph W. Byrns of Tennessee, leader of the House and chairman of the powerful Democratic congressional committee, Sam Rayburn of Texas; William B. Bankhead and John McDuffie of Alabama, Clifford Woodrum of Virginia, Lindsay Warren of North Carolina, and John W. McCormack of Massachusetts.

CHIEFS MAP BIG STRIKE PLANS

Sylvia said, and the delegates will be instructed to prepare the members of their unions to leave their spindles and looms on a minute's notice.

Sylvia announced that New England strike headquarters would be maintained in Pawtucket.

That the strike will be delayed until after Labor Day was intimated by officers of the U. T. W. A. at a meeting in New York. If called, the walkout will be limited to the cotton division of the textile industry, it was said, because of lack of funds to support a general strike.

STRIKE IS APPROVED

Delegates from all 52 locals of the union in Rhode Island were unanimous in their approval of the strike action. According to Joseph Gray, president of the Rhode Island Textile Council, the 50 locals includes in its membership 38,000 textile workers in Rhode Island. A walkout by this group would bring the industry to a standstill in that state.

Claims that textile operatives make only $10 a week now were voiced by Thomas F. McMahon, national president. He said:

"The principles for which we are fighting include the abolition of the stretch-out, or machine load system, which is the greatest evil in the industry today.

NEW BEDFORD PARLEY

"We are asking a 30-hour week, with the same wages as were paid for the 40-hour week. The average wage for the 40-hour week was $14, and under existing conditions with the men working 30 hours they are averaging $10 a week."

McMahon announced the appointment of directors for four regional offices for the strike. Horace Riviere, of Providence R. I., is in charge in this section.

Plans for the general strike will be discussed at a special meeting tonight of the New Bedford Textile Council. William E. T. Fatty, secretary, will acquaint members with plans of the walkout.

FILM STARS START FIGHT ON CHARGE OF AIDING 'REDS'

LUPE, IN RAGE, OPENS BATTLE WITH POLICE

Hollywood, Aug. 20—When he answered the phone, the desk sergeant of the Beverly Hills police, thought it was just another woman asking for her canary to be rescued.

But Lupe Velez' words, hot as the makings of a tamale, soon cured him of that idea. For Lupe was mad, and when Lupe gets mad, everyone, including Johnny Tarzan Weissmuller, her husband, jumps for cover.

Lupe's name, along with that of Dolores Del Rio, Ramon Novarro, and Jimmy Cagney, was found on a slip of paper in Sacramento Communistic headquarters, recently raided here by police.

INJUNCTIONS SOUGHT

The discovery was made public by District Attorney McAllister, who declared he would seek an injunction against screen stars contributing or aiding the radical cause.

SCREAMED DENIAL

"Me, a Communist? Ho, I don't even know what the word means. I never gave money to any such people. I need all my what you call dough."

Tarzan, grabbing the wire next, said he and Lupe were constantly contributing small sums to seemingly needy persons, but that they had never given one cent to aid any subversive movement.

CAGNEY IRATE

Cagney, whose ready fists, in the movies at least, have caused most people under six feet to think twice before speaking once, was in a fury at the suggestion that he was affiliated with the reds. He said:

"I will spend every dollar I have in the world to make the district attorney of Sacramento prove his charges that I gave money or aid to the radical cause, which are absolutely untrue."

Dolores, never as explosive as Lupe, turned white with rage when she heard of McAllister's charge.

"It is too silly for words," was all she would say.

Navarro is out of town, and could not be reached for comment.

LINKED TO COMMUNISTS

According to McAllister, the names of the stars were found without any notation in the personal effects of Caroline Decker, admitted Communist now under arrest.

Accompanying the names, however, was that of Lorenzo Ramirez, a man well known to authorities as a radical agitator in Fresno county.

Today McAllister will ask the court to set an early date for the trial of Miss Decker and the group accused with her. Should they be found guilty as charged, they face a 20-year jail sentence.

2 Women Escape in Crash of Plane

Osterville, Aug. 20—Two women fliers had their own cool nerve, and the fast rescue work of Major W. Sherburne Eaton of Boston to thank for their lives today after their plane sank during a life-saving exhibition at the Oyster Harbors flying meet.

Mrs. Margo Tanner, 25, New York society flier, and her passenger, Mrs. Laura Nay Brunton, 20, of New York, narrowly escaped death when her seaplane dived into the bay from a height of 50 feet.

The two women were able to extricate themselves from the wreckage as the plane sank, but Mrs. Tanner was injured over the left eye and was in a badly shaken condition when taken from the water by Major Eaton, who sped to their aid in a power boat.

Irene Franklin, Musical Star, Mate in Gayer Times

Irene Franklin, 10 years ago, when she was at the peak of her career and singing a ditty about "I want to be the janitor's child" that helped to make her famous. The musical comedy star today is mourning the death of her husband, Jerry Jarnagan who died under mysterious circumstances.

Irene Franklin and Jerry Jarnagan in happier days. Jarnagan, a composer, was found dead under mysterious circumstances in his Toluca Lake mansion. This picture was taken about 10 years ago when Irene was singing hit songs and Jarnigin was her accompanist. (Pictures from International News Photograph Service.)

COMPOSER SHOT DEAD AT PARTY

few minutes, Miss Franklin called:

"Hurry up, Jerry, dear, everything is getting cold."

Meanwhile, Miss Franklin and the guests, Miss Watson, her fiance, William Green, Lake Charleston, La., and Mrs. Wally Klein, had heard a muffled shot but had failed to realize its import.

Investigating the bizarre tragedy, detectives learned that Miss Franklin went into the living room to ask Jarnagan to hasten back to the feast.

WOUND OVER EAR

She screamed. Her husband's body was slumped in a chair. The three startled guests rushed to her and they found Jarnagan dead—a bullet wound just below the right ear. Police were called. They discovered the death weapon in the seat of a chair six feet from the chair in which Jarnagin's body was found.

The two chairs were so arranged, officers said, that it would have been impossible for Jarnagan to have tossed the pistol to the other chair in a spasmodic motion caused by the sudden agony of the fatal wound.

Further, the officers said, the wound indicated instantaneous death, prohibiting such a spasmodic gesture.

Jarnagan's clothing had not been disarranged, but his wrist watch was unclasped.

Two further elements pointed to murder. Miss Franklin said the death pistol had been placed under a pillow in their bedroom yesterday morning. Officers found the bed unruffled.

"Had Jerry done this thing himself I know he would not have stopped to smooth the bed after he had obtained the pistol," Miss Franklin sobbed.

The door and screen door of their bedroom were open.

"We always kept them both locked, and I'm sure they were that way before we started dinner," the actress said.

Officers also found evidence that a cupboard in a hallway had been ransacked and said it was possible someone had searched it hurriedly or might have been concealed in it.

Less than a month ago, officers were called to the Franklin mansion by Miss Franklin and Jarnagan who reported that a houseboy, Lawrence Thomas, 21, angry over being discharged when they refused use of the Franklin limousine, had attacked them and had injured Miss Franklin by striking her with a telephone. Thomas was arrested and charged with assault with a deadly weapon. He was released under bond.

Two Evangelists Willing, But Snake Won't Bite

By Associated Press

Birmingham, Ala., Aug. 20—A large rattlesnake with eight rattles twisted and turned in the hands of two Church of God evangelists before several hundred people—many of them admitted doubting Thomases—at a meeting last night but nothing happened. The snake just wouldn't bite.

Scattered about in the large audience at the open air meeting were numerous spectators who said they were skeptical of the performance of the Rev. D. L. Dodson of Nashville, Tenn., and the Rev. Paul Jones of Mobile, Ala.

Some said the snake's fangs had been removed. Others said that undoubtedly the reptile's poison sacs had been emptied.

Meanwhile, Mr. Dodson and Mr. Jones continued handling the snake.

Carl Lumpkin said the snake's fangs were all right. Carl's father caught the snake.

Mr. Dodson said he or any member of his party would handle any snake anyone wanted to bring them if the "spirit of God" was upon them.

But—unless they "felt the spirit" there would be no snake-handling, the minister said.

Uncle Fighting to Keep Antonio Boy

Schenectady, N. Y., Aug. 20 (AP)—Pasquale Cappello, brother of Mrs. Anna Antonio, executed for murder, today began a desperate fight to keep his guardianship over her three-year-old son, Frank, whom he has reared for two years.

Cappello returned with the lad at noon yesterday after a self-imposed three-day exile, begun when Mrs. Mary De Sisto, sister of Salvatore Antonio, the murdered father, sent representatives, armed with a court order giving her custody of Frankie. Before she died, Mrs. Antonio asked her brother to take care of the boy.

FOOD DEALERS AID DRIVE ON PROFITEERS

By Associated Press

Washington, Aug. 20—Food merchants promised today to help the government halt the growing spread between the prices the farmer gets and the consumer pays.

The drouth's effect on the cost of living has aroused several United States agencies. Officials indicated that the prices the housewife pays across the counters of stores were rising even more rapidly than the prices paid to the producers.

The National Food and Grocery Distributors' code authority pledged its support to the agricultural department in its drive against profiteering and speculation. The code authority speaks for 6000 food wholesalers and jobbers and 350,000 retailers.

The Treasury and Agriculture departments were drawing regulations today to put into effect President Roosevelt's move to get feed for livestock. The President has signed a proclamation lifting import duties on feed, which will come mostly from Canada.

Turning to another aspect of the farm situation, statistics showed today that Southern farmers participating in the government's cotton pool and loan program stand to profit $17,500,000 for each rise of one cent in the price of cotton.

PRAYERS ASKED FOR TALKER

By International News Service

Mt. Gilead, Ohio, Aug. 20—Residents of Edison, near here, today were petitioning Rev. Willard Grant, the town's only minister, to return from his vacation to lead a "campaign of prayer" for the recovery of Donald L. Campbell, 32, "talking sickness" victim.

The movement to exert the power of prayer in behalf of the man, who has been talking for 14 days, was started while members of the Campbell family and the family doctor clamped down a close-lipped silence regarding the condition of the sufferer.

Typical of Campbell's conversation is:

"Joe and I used to go swimming in Willow creek years ago, but now he is in favor of a tax on cigarettes. The Ohio cigarette tax is all wrong. It's hard to be a truck driver in Columbus. The radio was pretty good last night, don't you think, but I'm not getting any better."

Royal Children Fear Epidemic

London, Aug. 20—An outbreak of scarlet fever, and not fear of gangsters and possible kidnaping, are keeping the young Princesses Elizabeth and Margaret Rose close to Glamis Castle in the highlands of Scotland.

The Sunday Express published a report that the princesses and their parents, the Duke and Duchess of York, were being guarded as though "every casual visitor to the vicinity of the castle were a potential gangster."

Colonel Bowes Lyon, brother of the Earl of Strathmore, absolutely denied that any special precautions are being taken to guard the little granddaughters of King George and Queen Mary.

The only reason the girls have not been out as usual on shipping and sightseeing excursions is that there has been an outbreak of scarlet fever in the district, the statement of Colonel Lyon said.

"LITTLE EVA'S" ADMIRER WILL TAKE STAND

By Universal Service

Cooperstown, N. Y., Aug. 20—Facing the crucial week of her trial on a charge of murder, Mrs. Eva Coo is not afraid.

In her cell here she told a minister that she has nothing to fear. She shook her blonde hair vigorously as she maintained her innocence.

Then she turned complacently to the reading of what she called "serious" magazines. That mood did not last long and she switched to flightly love stories.

Today her most recent admirer, Harry Nablinger, was to take the witness stand.

Nablinger's testimony, however, was to be largely of the retold variety. He was not present the night of June 14 when, the state says, Eva Coo and Mrs. Martha Clift took Harry Wright for a ride up Crumhorn mountain and down the road by the haunted house of the hills.

The law charges that on Tobacco road Eva Coo knocked Wright into the path of an automobile driven by Martha and that the machine was see-sawed over him. The motive, according to the charge, was the $9000 insurance Eva had taken out on Wright's life.

But even more than on Nablinger, the state hopes to convict Eva on the testimony of Martha, who will take the stand against her erstwhile friend.

Firemen Dash to Aid Child

Seven consecutive days of idleness for the firemen of the Wollaston station, Quincy, during which time not even a still alarm had been rung in, ended when they rushed to the home of Mr. and Mrs. John Palmer, of Acton street.

Fire? Of course not, they don't have them in Quincy any more. The call was to rescue the young daughter of the household, Alice, aged three, who had locked herself in a room on the second floor.

So the firemen, clad in helmets, rubber boots, and rubber coats, raised a ladder, restored the imprisoned child to her parents, and went back to their station.

GIRLS DRIVEN FROM HOMES, POLICE REVEAL

By RUTH MUGGLEBEE

Thirty years ago, this was the piece de resistance of table gossip.

Thirty years later, it is still a vital and pressing problem.

Bringing it up-to-date, let us ask seriously:

Why does Miss 1934 leave home?

Policewoman McAuliffe

Why do young brides of modern times run away from their husbands?

What becomes of these girls and these young wives of today when they take flight and trust to luck?

What are the dangers and pitfalls that await them?

Who is to blame for the runaways and the thousands of tragedies that follow?

For the past few years more than 1000 persons annually have been reported "missing" to the Boston police department. Some of them are found, many are not. Of this number the majority are young women.

CHANGE IN FAMILY LIFE

Suburban police report similar situations in their communities.

What can be done about it?

Since the turn of the century, family life has changed. Modern and scientific improvements have brought a certain amount of leisure into the homes of the masses. Barbaric living conditions have been somewhat erased from modern-day existence.

And yet, girls leave home, brides run away, and relatives are desperate.

Back of it all, of course, is a sociological picture. But police are not psychiatrists, and to them, the question of runaways and missing persons has become so important a branch of their work, that a new and extensive bureau has been effected to aid them in locating these socalled "drop-out-of-sighters."

CLOSE CONTACT WITH GIRLS

In a series of intimate interviews with the Boston Evening American, Miss Irene McAuliffe, of the Bureau of Criminal Investigation of the Boston police department, depicts one of the greatest problems facing the police and parents today.

She is thoroughly familiar with this problem. She has had years of special experience and training in the police departments of Boston and Washington. She has had close contact with runaways and the young women who climax such a beginning by more serious offenses against conventional society.

Gone, of course, are the ten-twenty-thirty cent days of heavy melodrama when it was believed that every young innocent who disappeared was kidnaped by designing men and women, the woman detective has observed.

Girls leave home, she maintains, because they feel justified in so doing, because they have satisfied themselves that they could do much better out of the home than living in it. This is the brand new 1934 reason for the 1934 runaway.

NAGGING MOTHER BLAMED

It is a post-war situation of new-found independence that has broken out of its latent state in girls as young as 14 and 15.

Where 30 years ago, she says, country girls ran away to the city to seek fame and fortune and bask in the glittering lights of the Rialto, today city girls are staying in the cities, but living away from their families in apartments of their own or in rooming-houses.

The new urge is the individualistic trend towards self-expression and independence, Miss McAuliffe has found.

In many cases, parents are to blame for their missing and runaway daughters, she adds. The "nagging mother," she cites as an example.

In her series of interviews, Miss McAuliffe paints a striking and indelible picture that every mother, father and husband should read.

She says:

"Most often I do not go into the seamy side of police work when I am talking about my profession. Usually, I believe, that the less said about the seamy side, the better.

"However, there has come upon us in this century a new and different kind of age than when I was a youngster. Today we live in a world of sophistication, And this smart sophistication and insinuating presumption is exercising such overwhelming influence over young girls that thousands of them are being swept off their feet into a life that eventually is worse than death . . . into an empty existence that finally leads to desperation.

"Today we have new standards. These standards are way beyond the understanding of the average parents. They are quite intelligible, however, to youngsters of 14 and 15.

"Chastise a youngster these days, and she packs her bag and is off for adventure and fortune seeking.

"Girls who belong in pig-tails with dolls and nursery books are rouging and lipsticking and smoking and drinking in an irristible addiction to this new-found sophistication.

"It is because of this new problem, this 1934 situation, that I cannot refrain from painting a picture that I hope will prove a warning not only for the girls and young wives, but for the mothers and young husbands as well.

"Why girls leave home is not 'old stuff.' It is as new today as it was 30 years ago only for a newer reason.

"First of all, I want to explode the old belief that there are hundreds of girls kidnaped and dragged into involuntary vice by designing men and women. That idea should be tied up in moth balls and laid aside.

KIDNAP TALES 'HOKUM'

"Stories of abductions and kidnaping sound thrilling and make reading matter for the highly imaginative. But, I believe, that I could count on the fingers of my two hands the number of actual cases where young girls or young wives have been held against their will.

"Girls today know what it is all about. Make no mistake about that. And when they take it into their heads to leave home or run away from their husbands, they have figured the proposition out from all angles and decided that the 'break' was worth the gamble.

"Of course, there are some exceptions. But those are mighty few.

"When frantic mothers, bewildered fathers, nervous husbands and solicitous friends come to me with reports of missing girls or young wives, I have one stock question which I ask first:

"It is: 'What was the argument all about?'

BACK TO "GAY NINETIES"

"Stories that these runaways must have been dragged into an automobile, drugged and carried away against their will into lives of shame always amuse me. They are so reminiscent of the dark ages and the 'gay Nineties,' but so decidedly untrue of today.

"To answer the questions allied with the problem of why young women leave home, I intend in this series, to relate illustrative stories of actual cases, so that you may form your own conclusions.

"Perhaps, one of the most blatant causes for most missing girls and runaway wives can be found squarely in the home. Bring up a young girl, perhaps of sensitive nature, of a yearning for quiet and self-sufficiency, in a home where there is constant bickering and squabbling, where family arguments follow the slightest difference of opinion, where parents are constantly clawing each other with hands as well as with words, and eventually there will come about a missing daughter.

"In many cases, the girls are not to blame. They have a right to peace and quiet, parental companionship, love and adoration, and when they don't get it they seek it outside the home.

"The 'nagging' mother does more than her share in driving away from her portals her sons and daughters.

"The fundamental cause behind the missing girl problem is definitely the age in which we live today. This is an era of double-meaning conversation, unheard-of freedom, spirited independence, harped-on feminine emancipation coursing through the veins of impressionable young women.

"The young people of today are not the same as they were 25 years ago or even 10 years ago, when it was the practice to do not as you WANTED to do but as you were TOLD to do. I don't say they are wilder, or faster, or more susceptible to temptation. But I do say they are different. They are more sophisticated. Their sense of moral value is different.. Naivete is no longer an applied description of a 1934 girl. Call her smart, call her sophisticated, call her wise, and you have called the typical girl of today.

"The 14-year-old girl knows more today about things that her own mother has no notion of . . . things that many mothers never heard of or dreamed of. With such a youngster so far ahead of their mothers in worldly knowledge, is there any wonder that there is no common ground of understanding between the two . . . is there small wonder why we have the missing girl problem?

"Mothers, don't believe that your daughters are still children. For, these same children consider you old-fashioned . . . just another Alice in Wonderland about things that are open stories to them.

The Gabriele D'Annunzio Lodge 592, of Beverly, won two of the four cups presented as prizes in the parade.

The Quincy Women's Lodge 1436, won the third prize of a cup as the unit coming from the greatest distance to participate in the parade.

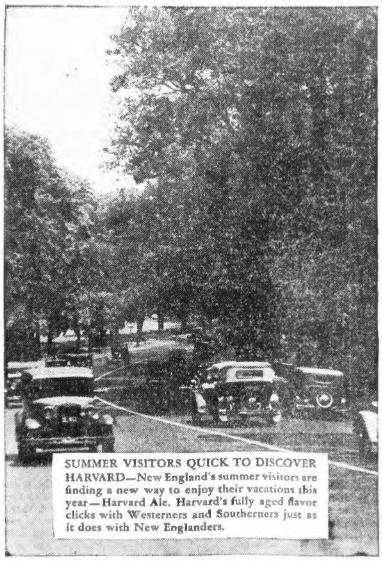
VACATIONISTS ACCLAIM FULLY AGED ALE



SUMMER VISITORS QUICK TO DISCOVER HARVARD—New England's summer visitors are finding a new way to enjoy their vacations this year—Harvard Ale. Harvard's fully aged flavor clicks with Westerners and Southerners just as it does with New Englanders.

"THEY LIKE OUR GREEN HILLS—BUT THEY WANT ALE THAT'S FULLY AGED," say Francis Chase and Steve Radochia, owners of The White Spot, at Woburn Four Corners—a popular stopping place for tourists. "Which means more people are asking for Harvard every day."

TAKES LONGER TO BREW HARVARD—Not a keg or a bottle ever leaves the brewery until it is fully aged. Sure, it takes longer to brew Harvard. But, man how much better Harvard tastes. And how much better it makes you feel.

Bishop to Get Hays' Pledge

By Associated Press

New York, Aug. 20—Will H. Hays has assured Archbishop John T. McNicholas, of Cincinnati, that producers are heeding the demand of the church for better pictures. In a letter to the Archbishop made public yesterday, Hays, president of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, said his organization:

"Is happy to be able to inform Your Excellency that arrangements, which are intended more effectively to influence the character of motion pictures produced by members of our association have been carried into effect."

Replying, Archbishop McNicholas, chairman of the Catholic Bishops' Committee on Motion Pictures, expressed satisfaction with the motion picture industry's response. The Archbishop recognized that the industry needed time in which to show the desired results in its self-improvement drive.

Sex, Styles Stymie Sten

Anna Sten, above, Russian movie star, says designers of women's clothes who over-emphasize sex are not doing the "working girl" any favors. In fact she says, they are a hindrance to the fair sex. The working girl should not attract attention to herself as a woman. (Picture from International News Photograph Service.)

Keep Sex Out of Styles, Is Advice of Anna Sten

By Associated Press

Hollywood, Aug. 20—As Anna Sten sees it, a woman is better able to work when she does not attract attention to herself as a woman.

"Femininity—sex, if you wish —isn't an asset to a woman working for a living," the blonde Russian movie actress said today. It's a distraction."

She criticized modern designers of women's clothes as over-emphasizing sex.

"I think designers should not spend their time thinking up creations that do nothing but expose a girl's figure," she said. "There are many beautiful dresses and costumes that could be made without accenting a woman's sex.

"If she is a charming woman the fact will be known even though she is clothed in burlap sacks."

Miss Sten looks upon the modern woman primarily as a worker—a "fighter in the battle for existence," as she puts it.

"Men and women," she said, "should be able to work beside each other, unconscious of the fact that they are men and women, but thinking only of their work."

turned out to be gallant welchers.

The latest display of American financial genius consists in shipping American gold abroad. First, the government took away any gold that American citizens happened to have. It was too good for them. Then we raised the price of gold to $35 per ounce, nearly doubling it, thus enriching the British, that own the world's principal gold mines. Now we start sending abroad that gold, bought at fantastic prices with American taxpayers' money or taken from citizens by high-handed methods.

If there is among the African bushmen a six months' old infant that knows less about money than the gentlemen that manage the finances of this country, that infant should be exhibited here as the legitimate successor of Barnum's "what-is-it."

Russia uses one of the finest former residences of the Czars as a summer and health resort for workers.

Sun baths are recommended and are taken in mass formation. Hundreds stretched out, side by side, gazing upward, absorbing ultra violet rays, hear a bell ring; instantly all turn over to take the sun on the other side. The bell rings again, and all turn on their backs again.

Surely there is in that Russian arrangement some valuable suggestion for our government management of all activities. You could not imagine our great industrialists all rolling over at the sound of an NRA bell, but the idea could be used, in SOME fashion.

This is good news. Despite all our troubles, drouth included, farm incomes for 1934 are up more than one billion dollars. Government gives the figures as follows: For 1934, $5,950,000,000. For 1933, $4,858,000,000. That includes monies paid by government to farmers for NOT planting, for farrow sows, later drowned with their unborn pigs, etc.

Some suggest that the drouth was a punishment for drowning those innocent little pigs, but you could not imagine Providence putting an unborn pig, eyes not even open, yet, ahead of the plans of college professors.

Is there too much baseball in prison life? In the Illinois Pontiac Reformatory, the prisoners were playing baseball, as usual. Only 30 guards in charge of 2400 men. The customary riot broke out, prelude to a "general break." The attempt failed, for rifles "cracked" promptly, 16 were shot down, some will die. Three guards were beaten, the print shop was set on fire, flames spreading to the laundry and storeroom, prisoners yelling "burn the whole place down."

The 2400 prisoners were all young men from 17 to 26 years of age. That is the important detail.

FIVE DROWN AS BOAT UPSETS

By Associated Press

Portland, Ore., Aug. 20—Three Portland families today mourned five relatives drowned on a Sunday afternoon boating party on the Columbia river here when a 15-foot outboard motor boat capsized.

Mrs. O. G. McCann and son, Delbert, were drowned. Mr. McCann and his 5-year-old daughter, Orva, were saved.

Police are dragging the river for the bodies of Marvin Gholson, 37, and 6-year-old daughter, Audrey. Mrs. Gholson and daughter, Jean, 7, stayed afloat with an automobile inner tube until pulled to shore.

Billy Nelson, a youth, clung to the overturned boat for a short time, but sank before rescuers reached him.

CAPONE SPEEDS TO ALCATRAZ

(By International News Service)

Atlanta, Aug. 20—A rolling fortress today was reported bearing Al Capone across the continent from the federal penitentiary here to Alcatraz, Uncle Sam's new "Devil's Island" prison for hardened criminals, in San Francisco Bay.

Picked squads of well armed federal agents guarded the two steel railroad coaches carrying two score convicts to the grim island prison.

Among them, it was reliably reported, was the swarthy Capone, former overlord of Chicago's gangdom of prohibition days, who still must serve eight years of a sentence for income tax fraud.

Quietly the prisoners, considered the most dangerous and notorious of the government's wards, were taken from the penitentiary cells here early Sunday morning and hustled aboard the coaches in the penitentiary siding. Escape from Alcatraz Island, hemmed in by swift flowing tides, is considered impossible.

STRATO FLIERS ON WAY HOME

By International News Service.

Ljubljana, Jugoslavia, Aug. 20—Two young men who dropped unexpectedly out of the sky and did not even know what country they were in, were reported on their way here today to get the Orient Express back to Brussels.

They were Prof. Max Cosyns and Neree Van Der Elst, whose ascent into the stratosphere in a balloon from Hour-Havenne, near Brussels, was not a record-breaking one in height, but probably the longest high altitude flight on record.

Professor Cosyns was jubilant that he had brought his delicate instruments safely to earth.

FIRE SUSPECT FLEES QUIZZERS

By Associated Press

Skowhegan, Me., Aug. 20—The Sheriff's Department today said no official effort was being made to hunt down Manford Collway, 40, in connection with three fires here, which caused an estimated $150,000 damage yesterday. Collway, a former convict, slipped from the office of County Attorney Clayton Eames early today, and disappeared.

James Lamport, 22, of Waltham, Mass., died in the flames of the first blaze, at the Skowhegan Fair grounds.

Lamport's employer, Fred Booth, was seriously burned in attempting to rescue his employe. Leslie Whitney of this town, also received bad burns.

DEDHAM PLANS DEATH PROBE

Behind closed doors and with all members of the police department excluded, the Dedham board of selectmen will tonight seek to learn the cause of the suicide of Henry D. Horn, Jr., janitor of the Dedham Institution for Savings.

The special meeting of the selectmen was called at the request of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Horn, Sr., who asked that an investigation of their foster son's death be made.

Horn was found dead in a corridor of the bank last Monday, the seventh anniversary of his wedding. A bottle of poison, with some of the contents missing, was found in Horn's locker.

Since his death gossip linked the name of a police official with Horn's act. No charges have been filed against anyone in the police department.

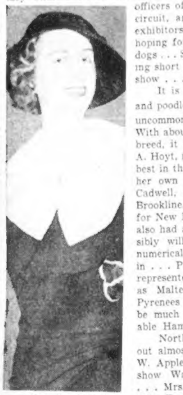
MAN'S BEST FRIEND will have his day next Saturday . . . Leading kennels from all over the East and as far West as Ohio are entering their prize dogs in the North Shore Kennel Club show next Saturday, August 25, at the Myopia Hunt Club polo field.

President Gilbert L. Steward, Vice-President Smith, Secretary Charles W. Greenough and Treasurer Justin W. Griess, officers of the latest newcomer to the circuit, are elated with the response exhibitors are making and they are hoping for an entry of seven hundred dogs . . . Such an entry would be nothing short of marvelous for a first-year show . . .



MRS. NORMAN VAUGHAN

It is interesting that dachshunds and poodles, breeds usually considered uncommon, are leading the show . . . With about thirty now entered in each breed, it appears that Mrs. Sherman A. Hoyt, noted poodle judge, who won best in the show at Lenox with one of her own dogs last week, and F. A. Cadwell, the dachshund expert from Brookline, will draw record entries for New England . . . Cocker spaniels also had a substantial entry, and possibly will top all the other breeds numerically when the final returns are in . . . Practically all the breeds are represented, and the rare breeds, such as Maltese, Afghan hounds, Great Pyrenees and golden retrievers, will be much in evidence at the fashionable Hamilton event . . .

North Shore kennels are turning out almost without exception. James W. Appleton, master of Myopia, will show Waldingfield Kennels' beagles . . . Mrs. Robert Hale Bancroft and Miss E. C. Bancroft of Hale Farms Kennels, Beverly Farms, will exhibit Maltese . . . Afghan hounds of Q. A. Shaw McKean of Pride's Crossing will arouse much interest . . . From the kennels of Bayard Warren of Pride's Crossing will come Sealyhams, Pekingese and Afghans.

North Shore Exhibitors

MR. AND MRS. GRIESS, whose kennels of Salamagundi are in Hamilton, will show poodles . . . Redledge Kennels, Ipswich, dachshunds . . . Thomas Sanders, Topsfield, bull terriers Dudley P. Groveman Ellis of Eastern Point, judge of hunters and jumpers in recent horse shows, Irish wolfhounds . . . Norman D. Vaughan, Hamilton, his famous Eskimo dogs . . . Mrs. Frederick Winthrop, Ipswich, Belgian sheep dog and Cairn terriers . . . James H. Morgan and Miss Anne P. Ayer, Ipswich, salukis . . .

Still other North Shore dog lovers who will seek prizes at Myopia are James Reynolds, Wenham, Irish setters . . . John P. Humes, Beverly, wire fox terriers . . . Ira Nelson Morris, Manchester, a schnauzer . . . Mrs. Isaac W. Jeannes, Gloucester, Pekingese . . . Gladys Perry, Salem, bulldog . . . Mrs. Elizabeth N. Goodhue of Salem, bulldog . . . William L. CALL AGAIN, SON!

"It's nice to hear from you — Glad you like camp so well — Are you getting good and brown? — Have you received my last letter, yet? — Your mother and I may drive up next Sunday."

ONLY A TELEPHONE can fill the bill when sons and daughters are away at camp or school, or just visiting. The sound of their voices every so often is tremendously reassuring, and there are a lot of little things that mothers — and fathers, too — want to say, and many questions for which they'd like to have answers in person.

To illustrate the low cost of toll calls made during the evening and night rate periods, the following typical rates are cited for a 3 minute station-to-station call (that is, a call by number) from

CONCHITA MONTENEGRO IN LEADING ROLE -:- NEW BILLS AT SUMMER PLAYHOUSES

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS
Motion Picture Editor Universal Service

Los Angeles, Aug. 20—Not a word of English will be spoken by Conchita Montenegro in "Hell and the Heavens." She will sputter in French from start to finish, mixing her parlez vous Francais with Warner Baxter's best English. Curious that the femme lead should talk only French while the rest of the cast chatters in English, also the director, John Blystone.

Al Rockett, who is producing "Hell and the Heavens," adapted from "The Ace," chose Miss Montenegro to play opposite Warner Baxter, because it was in his "Cisco Kid" she made her first success. It's the Montenegro gal's biggest chance since she left the Fox company.

Discussion over "Forsaking all Others" on the Metro - Goldwyn - Mayer lot today, Joan Crawford, the star in the story that Tallulah Bankhead brought to the stage, was being interviewed on the question of cast. Bernie Hyman, who will do the picture, has Clark Gable and Robert Montgomery in mind for the two male leads, and all that remained today was the final okay to go ahead. Certainly Miss Crawford, and Mr. Gable and Mr. Montgomery, if they appear with her, get a break in having W. S. Van Dyke direct them.

It has been so quiet on the Radio lot for weeks and weeks that signs of production news is welcome. Heard today that a comedy murder mystery called "Lightning Strikes Twice" will bring an interesting crowd of actors together. Ben Lyon has the principal role and Ben is just as good if not better in light comedy than he is in heavier roles. His pal, Skeets Gallagher, Polly Moran, Chick Chandler and Pert Kelton as the lineup. Ben Holmes will direct and it's his first feature. The story is by Mr. Holmes and Marion Dix, and contains thrills, chills and nonsense.

Even Profits in Iron

By ARTHUR "BUGS" BAER

Now that we have made a national profit out of gold and silver we might see what we can do with scrap iron.

The public debt hopped a fraction to twenty-seven billion dollars in cash prizes. Our assets are forty-eight states, five great lakes and the New York city skyline.

Twenty-seven billion is what we would call fancy figure skating.

With school soon to start we hope the teachers will not waste the children's time by teaching them subtraction.

Just give 'em addition and multiplication and start 'em out to be the greatest treasurers of the U. S. since Alexander Hamilton.

"Romance In The Rain" New Film at Keith Memorial

By JOYCE DANA

A modern Cinderella may dispense with the fairy godmother, if she'll only win a contest. In "Romance in the Rain," a strictly twentieth century version of the old fairy story at the Keith Memorial, Heather Angel wins a nation-wide Cinderella contest, by writing wistfully to the editor of "Livid Love Tales" all about pressing her little nose against life's window panes.

It all came about when Roger Pryor as the never-say-die press agent for a group of confession publications, found his Cinderella in the rain. She, too, lived with a wicked stepmother, in this case a blousy lady addicted to gin, and a couple of step sisters, less ugly but quite obviously also less righteous than the originals. Her sorry plight moves him not only to sympathy, but to the inspired idea of the Cinderella contest.

Once the laurels, Rolls-Royces, orchids and caviar of the winner are her's, our Cynthia yearns only for the heart of her Prince Charming. The strangely obtuse young man is blind to her charms, and stonily regards her as merely good copy. In another burst of genius he arranges for her marriage to the winner of a similar contest for America's most dashing and deserving young man.

Not until the wedding bells are ringing in the world's largest stadium, with 50,000 paying customers assembled for a combination of the nation's greatest football game and love match, does Roger wake up.

Some excellent comedy has been added to the lightly romantic tale by Victor Moore as the editor of the pulp magazines that bare people's passions for 10 cents a copy, and by Esther Ralston as the self-appointed lady of his heart who could have supplied his periodicals with plenty of confessions of her own.

Roger Pryor and Heather Angel emerge with only second honors in acting. The musical Mr. Pryor contributes a couple of good songs, and the aptly named Miss Angel displays a sweet and appealing ingenue innocence.

Paul Kaye is the handsome youth who wins the contest and decides to give the little girl a break and marry her, while Ruth Donnelly, Christian Rub and others are in the cast.

At Norumbega

There are all sorts of entertainment features at Norumbega Park, from dancing to the country's leading orchestras at the Totem Pole, to the big zoo with its fascinating inhabitants.

Both during the day and evening the many attractions include the free animal circus, movies and rides, while there are water sports and games scheduled throughout the week. During the season all attendance records have been eclipsed at the park.

South Shore Players Present "Mary Tudor" at Cohasset; "White Cargo" on Cape

Alexander Dean presents Mary Phillips and the South Shore players in Victor Hugo's "Mary Tudor" tonight at the Cohasset Town Hall. This marks the first professional production in America of the Hugo version of the unhappy career of England's "Bloody Queen Mary" and the 100th anniversary of the last presentation in France.

A strong cast has been assembled in support of Miss Philips in the role of the unhappy monarch, with Humphrey Bogart as the villianous Fabiano, and Joan Kenyon, Kirk Lucas, Seth Arnold and Aldrich Bowker n featured roles. Others in the large cast are Broderick Crawford, Alan Hewitt, and Gordon Gould. The elaborate settings for the three acts are by Frederick Burleigh.

"White Cargo," Leon Gordon's drama of South America, will be the offering at the Beach Theater at West Falmouth, opening on Wednesday evening. The now famous character of Tondeleyo, will be played by Miriam Battista, and others in the cast are Richard Whorf, Robert Ross, Jay Fassett, Robert Thomsen and Morton L. Stevens.

The Cape Playhouse at Dennis turns to "The Shining Hour," with Margalo Gilmore and Rollo Peters in the leading roles. A week's engagement opens tonight with other parts taken by Ruth Hammond, Eda Heinemann, Pierre Watkin and Phillip Huston.

With Vera Allen as Rosalind and Peter de Cordoba as Jacques, F. Cowles Strickland tonight presents Shakespeare's "As You Like It" at Stockbridge. The Ted Shawn dancers will present a series of special dances with the productions. Richard Hale, Gage Clarke, Sylvia Field and Harry Gresham are also in the cast.

Walter Hartwig will offer "Obsession," another new play, by Martin Berkeley at the Ogunquit Playhouse, opening this evening. The cast includes Russell Gleason, Florence Williams, Frank Roberts, John Meredith, Molly Pearson, A. J. Herbert and Frederick Barker.

At the Mt. Desert Playhouse, at Bar Harbor, another of the summer groups offers "The Shining Hour," with Donald Blackwell, Merna Pace, Muriel Brassler, Ethel Morrison, and Whitner Bissell in the cast.

At Peterborough, N. H., Howard Inches offers another world premiere, "Now That April's There," by Edwin Gilbert.

The last of the summer theater presentations are announced for the following two weeks at vacation resorts throughout New England. Some of the new plays tried out will go into New York during the coming season, while a profitable season for most of the resort theaters assures New Englanders of the probability of more dramatic treats another summer.

King Vidor Home

King Vidor, director of "The Big Parade," "Street Scene," "Hallelujah," and other noted screen plays, has returned from Europe with the print of his newest production, "Our Daily Bread," which features Karen Morely and Tom Keen in the cast.

Given in Marriage

—By Adele Garrison—

CHAPTER 119

HELENA BRIXTON was running true to form, I reflected, as from Lillian's displeased rejoinder I gleaned that Mrs. Brixton must have made some particularly feminine and petty objection to Mary's wish that Carolyn act as her bridesmaid.

Lillian was listening intently now, her face set in lines of displeasure and determination. Leaning forward as if I, too, had my ear to the telephone, I listened as intently as she, hearing only an occasional high-pitched note from Helena's excited voice.

"Where do you get that stuff, 'second choice'?" she demanded; and had I not seen the twinkle in her eyes as she looked at me, and the sardonic smile which played around her lips, I should have thought her as angry as the timber of her voice indicated.

"For the love of Abraham, Isaac and Jacob, Helena, act your age," she went on. "You sound exactly like a boarding school freshman who thinks she's been slighted in some election for office in her sorority. 'Second choice,' my off eye! As if there ever could be any matter of second choice with Carolyn. Do you want me to tell you again, in words of one syllable, that because of the smallness of the wedding Mary had planned to have but one attendant? And of course that one was Marion, who for years has been like the sister she never had.

THE BATTLE WON

"The moment this ultimatum of Phil's came up—that Avis must be a bridesmaid—Mary didn't lose a second in asking for Carolyn. You know Carolyn will be crazy to do it! Now the question is, are you going to make everybody unhappy by trotting out objections so moth-eaten that they fall to pieces almost before anybody can hear them? That's right; laugh, you dratted idiot! But I don't care how much you laugh, if you'll only stop this nonsense and say you'll help us out, like the dear you are."

I knew the battle was won, even before Lillian swung one arm high above her head, as she listened to what her friend was saying. When she spoke again, there was mischief as well as mirth in her smile.

"What do I want you to do?" she said?" Plenty, and then some! It's a job you'll love, too, or you're not the same old Helena I used to know, who'd rather go shopping for pretty gowns than anything else.

"The Grahams are providing the gowns for their niece's attendants, and they don't want to spare any reasonable expense. Now, let me tell you the idea. The decorations are autumn leaves and laurel—the whole house is a bower of laurel—the house is a bower of them—and those little bronzy chrysanthemums that have a touch of rosecolor, you know? Then to top everything, Phil is sending over just bushels—Madge doubts the quantity, but I know him—of those exquisite roses—you know, the ones with the real rose color tips shading almost to bronze, through ivory?

THE WEDDING GOWN

Helena evidently did know, for her high staccato voice sounded again, and Lillian nodded approval.

"I thought that would get you where you live," she said. "Now put your massive mind on this. Mary's gown is that ivory white that blends with everything, and Marion's is the rose color that's exactly like the tips of the blossoms. She's going to carry a cluster of them. Of course Carolyn and Avis will carry the same thing, and I want you to find some of that changeable silk that will bring out the lighter bronzes of those roses."

There were some more high-pitched exclamations, and Lillian grinned at me.

"Gramercy for the watercress," she said. "But you're the lady who will have to do the selecting. How early can you get into New York, and when had you planned to meet Carolyn?"

There was another wait, and Lillian's eyebrows narrowed in a way that I knew meant she was concentrating upon Helena's transportation problems.

"Why not let the boys come down to New York by train? And I know Phil will send Otto and the big car down for Marion and Carolyn. Bring one of your maids along to go down with Otto, and send a note to Mrs. Barnes authorizing them to come that way. Better telephone her, too. She knows Otto and the car, though; so that part of your problem won't be difficult.

"All right. Suppose I telephone the first thing in the morning to the shop where the gowns for Marion and Mary were made, and ask them to hold the day for you, saying that the two gowns must be ready tomorrow night? Better bring an old gown of Carolyn's that fits her, which they can rip up and get her measurements. When's she leaving Whitney—eleven? Oh, that will give loads of time.

"As soon as you've bought the material, telephone Avis Arlen—here's the number—and tell her to meet you at the shop. I'll see that she's ready to start, and I'll have all the arrangements made with the shop for the gowns.

"Is there anything else you want to know, darling? That's what I thought. I'll give you leave to take your revenge in any way you wish when I see you. Telephone me if there's anything you need.

"Oh, most important of all! Put the shop wise not to let Avis Arlen know her dress will be finished tomorrow night. I want her to get it the next morning, so that she won't be out here too early.

Street Frocks With a Touch of Fur

By Prunella Wood

LOTS of women, especially the diminutive ones, don't get much kick out of fur scarfs and capes. For them one can recommend frocks that are trimmed subtly with bits of fur and which, with the proper gloves, hat, shoes and bag, will make elegant street costumes a little later on, come early frosts.

It must be taken for granted that these women for whom we are providing gratuitous advice like their things a bit Russian, for that is the way our fur-trimmed gowns are headed just now. We have the tunic smock effect, with a bit of krimmer or astrakhan bordering its neckline somewhere; we have cartridge pleat details on pockets—and Russian sable or near-sable bands or borders elsewhere on the model to back up the military Russian details; and we have deep bands of broadtail on skirts and cuffs of other cloth models.

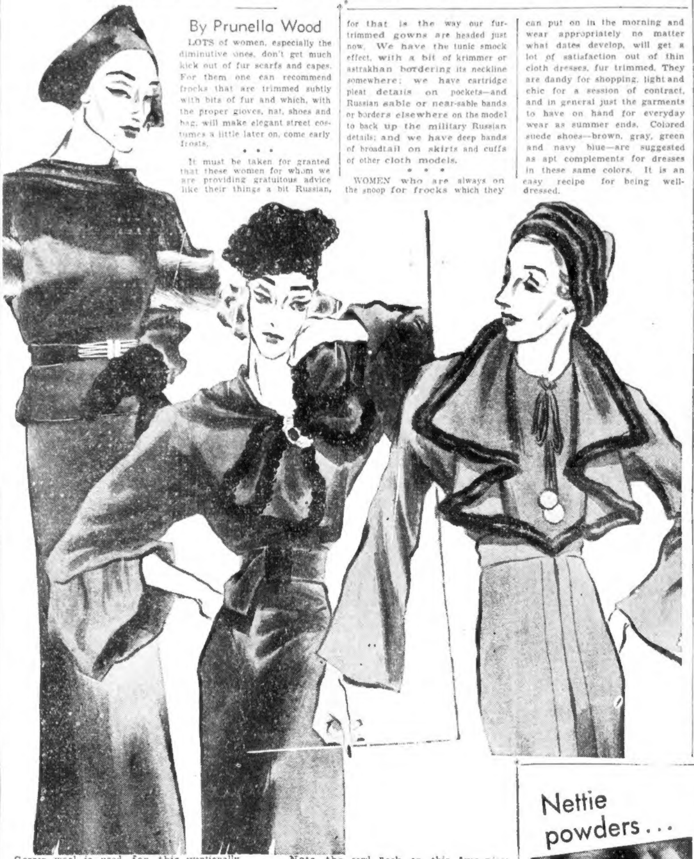
WOMEN who are always on the snoop for frocks which they can put on in the morning and wear appropriately no matter what dates develop, will get a lot of satisfaction out of thin cloth dresses, fur trimmed. They are dandy for shopping, light and chic for a session of contract, and in general just the garments to have on hand for everyday wear as summer ends. Colored suede shoes—brown, gray, green and navy blue—are suggested as apt complements for dresses in these same colors. It is an easy recipe for being well-dressed.



Copper wool is used for this exceptionally graceful autumn frock. The skirt has two stitched folds down the center back to match those in front, so that the costume looks like a long top coat over a matching frock. Sable type fur edges the jabot collar which is tied with a cord of self-material ending in gold balls. Note the perfectly plain, wide sleeve. The three hats pictured are: An antelope tricorne; silk astrakhan Cossack hat; and a copper velvet toque with a sable band.

Note the cowl neck on this two-piece brown sheer wool frock. It is especially good with the drop shoulder yoke, which is accented with broad kolinsky edgings. The skirt is slim and slightly belled at the hem. The belt on the peplum blouse is buckled with yellow gold metal. Center, a wool frock in the new shade of green, rich and dark, which has a draped cowl neckline involved with a self-material bow bordered with black astrakhan fur. The big sleeves are pouched attractively at the elbow, and the peasant cut over the shoulders is both flattering and comfortable:

Calling a Spade a Diamond in New Culbertson System

By JOSEPHINE CULBERTSON

[This is one of a series of articles in which Mrs. Culbertson explains certain principles of the new Culbertson System of Play. The examples and rules given by Mrs. Culbertson in these articles have never been published heretofore and are exclusive in Boston with the Boston Evening American.]

In science it is now recognized that pragmatic truth—that is, a near enough approach to truth to permit of practical results—is largely a matter of terminology. Nobody, the last I heard of the matter, had seen an atom or an electron. Yet by thinking in terms of such hypothetical entities the scientists have so stimulated invention as to bring about television and technocracy.

In Bridge, I am a pragmatist, and I believe in the importance of terminology. A low trump may not be a super-Ace in another suit, and a combination such as spade x diamond K Q may not constitute a diamond tenace, but the player who occasionally thinks of them as such and finesses accordingly will often get better results than the one who refuses to call a spade anything but a spade.

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 ♠	Pass	3 ♠	Pass
6 ♠	Pass	Pass	Pass

South was quite unfortunate in the bidding, since the 1½ honor-tricks North needed for his double raise happened to be in the one suit in which they could do South no good. But the law of compensation provided some balm for this duplication of values when West opened the club King, hoping to establish a trick in that suit before his Ace of diamonds was gone. The first trick was won by Dummy's club Ace, and South had to be very careful in discarding.

The heart Jack had to be saved, for it was the sole hope of making the contract, as South discarded a diamond. After winning the first trick, Dummy led a heart and South boldly finessed the Jack, which won because the gods of chance had placed the Queen with East. Now the Ace and King of hearts were led and South, with a sigh of relief, discarded Dummy's losing diamond.

South's worries were not over however, because after drawing trumps he would not have enough spades left in Dummy to ruff out the entire diamond suit and thus must seek to establish at least one diamond as a winning trick in its own right. This he effected by ruffing out West's Ace. First the trumps were drawn, East winning the Ace on the first round and returning a trump. South now ruffed the five and Jack of diamonds in the Dummy and two low clubs in his own hand.

Had either the club Queen or the diamond Ace fallen on these plays sufficient tricks would have been established without taking any chance. When after these four plays South was back in the lead and both minor suits were as yet unestablished, a new line of play was necessary. South therefore led the diamond King, and West was powerless. If he put up the Ace Dummy would ruff and South's Queen would be established.

If he played low, one of Dummy's clubs would be discarded and the diamond King would win the trick, whereupon the Ace would fall on the next round and be ruffed.

Shower Minus a Wedding

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

My best girl friend is to be married in a month or two. She will be married with just a couple of witnesses. I wish to give her a shower, but she thinks that it would not be proper since she will not have a wedding. She feels it is receiving too much when she can not in return invite anyone to the ceremony.

Would it be so improper to give her a shower under these circumstances?

R.

This friend of yours is being very thoughtful and sweet in her point of view about this shower, but I do think that she is perhaps being too sensitive about it. Do try to persuade her that her friends would love to give this shower for her, as an evidence of their devotion, and also that, when she is in her new home, there will be many charming opportunities for her to offer hospitality to these friends which will make up for the fact that she could not invite them to her wedding. I do hope that she will let you plan this shower for her. It's wonderful to hear about a girl who doesn't have a grasping point of view about showers!

New Ways to Dress Up Ice Cream

By Martha Lee

From Martha Lee's Monday Morning Broadcast Over Station WAAB.

"STONE walls do not a prison make"—nor plain ice cream a party! Delicious though ice cream and sherbets may taste to wilted palates, popular as they are for summer dining, they don't make a feast unless they are adorned, accompanied or combined. Serve them plain for mealtime but when that certain party comes to your house, dress them up!

There are dozens of different ways to serve ice cream and ices. First are "toppings"—the sauces with which to make the so-American sundae. Garnishes are nutmeats, cocoanut, and such fruits as dates, bananas and cherries. Accompaniments include cookies, cake, puddings and crackers. And last, there are those combinations—ice cream sandwiches, "floats," and "shakes"—that are cooling throats everywhere.

"FLOATING" IS COOL

"Floats," as every soda fountain habitue can tell you, are made by dropping a generous lump of ice or ice cream into a beverage. Orange ice in ginger ale, pineapple sherbet in lemonade, and grapefruit ice in orangeade are popular combinations. Equally delicious are the "shakes"—made by mixing ice cream with milk and a sauce or fruit. New this year are the banana shakes, especially recommended for children. Ice cream sandwiches are always welcome, and an ice cream and torte all in one is proving a success at summer parties. Recipes for some of the newest and best ways of using the national delicacy are given. You will like every one of them!

BANANA ICE CREAM SHAKE

Slice or break a ripe banana into a medium wire mesh strainer; press through strainer with spoon into cocktail shaker. Add a cup of cold milk, ¼ teaspoon vanilla and a ball of vanilla ice cream and shake vigorously until well mixed. Or, mash bananas with a spoon, beat with a rotary egg beater, then add other ingredients and beat until smooth.

GINGERBREAD ICE CREAM SANDWICHES

Bake gingerbread in cup cake tins. When cool, remove from pans and slice in two, crosswise. Place a large spoonful of vanilla ice cream on each lower half, replace top half. Pour chocolate sauce over top or garnish with whipped cream and a nutmeat.

LIQUID SHAMPOO WITH RICH, CREAMY LATHER IS FINE FOR DRY SCALP

(POSED BY CARMEN BARNES)

By Juliet Shelby

THERE is always the problem of how to keep hair lovely—lovely with the sheen of vitality; soft, smooth-ended and fragrant.

Beautiful hair, becomingly dressed, is a great asset to any woman. There is no doubt of that. It enhances her facial beauty, and I have yet to meet the man who does not secretly, if not openly, admire a woman whose hair is lustrous and fragrant.

Normal hair, in summertime, requires a shampoo once every ten days; oily hair requires shampooing more frequently; dry hair less frequently.

Before shampooing run your comb over your scalp to scratch up all dandruff. Next brush your hair for five minutes to remove the dandruff (be sure your brush is clean) and allow the bristles to stimulate the dry scalp, keep them away, however, from the oily scalp.

There is a liquid shampoo that I can recommend for every type of scalp, for children as well as adults. There are very few shampoos that are so versatile—because oily hair usually demands a more "cutting" lotion.

The shampoo of which I speak is an efficient cleanser. It has no drying propensities and is therefore excellent for the dry scalp. Oily scalps benefit by its usage, and any shade of hair remains its natural color and acquires a lovely lustre to boot!

So if you are using the wrong shampoo for your type of hair (and that happens so frequently), or if you have been negligent in using cake soap instead of a liquid one, I suggest that you try this shampoo and play safe.

You may learn the name of this shampoo and where it is sold by sending a stamped self-addressed envelope to Juliet Shelby, Boston Evening American, or telephoning Miss Shelby, Liberty 4000.

HITLER SHOWED GREATNESS DURING TRYING WAR DAYS

HIS IDEAS, IF ADOPTED, MAY HAVE CHANGED WAR

The Boston Evening American today continues its series of articles on Hitler, the human question mark of Europe. Most talked of man in the world today, the dictator of Germany holds the key to the problem of war or peace in Europe. Begin the series today.

CHAPTER 7

When did Hitler begin to be great?

Now that he is all-powerful, many persons ask themselves that question.

Looking back over a career that appears almost magical, many persons are impressed with his grasp of affairs both before and during the World War.

Anyone able to think reasonably and soundly during war days comes very near to being great.

Hitler's ability as a thinker became clear cut during his Munich days immediately preceding the war. And it may safely be said that his race to power started from that point in his career. Slowly at first, but gathering momentum as it went along!

Had the German leaders listened to Hitler, could their defeat have been avoided?

But who was Hitler, that great diplomats should bend an ear to him? Nothing but a carpenter of Munich, with no real friends and few acquaintances.

Still, his logic was sound when he opposed Germany's entering the Triple Alliance.

He argued that through it Austria would cause Germany untold losses. He never deviated from that contention.

"For Germany," he said, "it was a pure piece of luck that the war broke out in 1914 indirectly by way of Austria and that the Hapsburgs were thus forced to take part in it; if it had happened the other way round, Germany would have been left all by herself."

All too late did the German statesmen discover the truthfulness of this view pertaining to the Triple Alliance.

Had there been no Triple Alliance, Germany might never have entered the World War, he always has held. And thus she might have escaped the fate which befell her.

Likewise, it might have been better—certainly it could not have been worse—had the German Army Staff taken the views of Private Hitler into consideration.

But who was Private Hitler?

However, the German Army might have learned something about one subject at Headquarters, had it chosen to get the views of Private Hitler.

Opposed Program of War Propaganda

That subject was war propaganda!

Hitler had been thinking much of it. And saw that the German and Austrian idea of using it was wrong. Under their system, the newspapers, schools and other outlets pictured the enemy, particularly the English, in a ridiculous light. The comic papers made fun of them fighting.

Hitler knew that picture was wrong. Because he and his Bavarian soldier comrades who had gone out to struggle with the enemy in the mudholes before Ypres, had found out differently! They had found out that those Scotsmen and Englishmen could die fighting. Without a whimper!

Hitler viewed this as a very grave mistake on the part of the Austro-German leaders.

Then, too, Private Hitler was aware of the discontent which enemy propaganda was breeding within the eGrman lines.

Early in 1915, the Allies flooded the Bavarian regiments with leaflets dropped from aeroplanes, and attacking the rule of the Kaiser.

Those leaflets addressed the young Bavarians, of whom Hitler was one, as "friends," and exhorted them to revolt against the Kaiser. The war, the leaflets explained, was not against the German people, but against the Kaiser as a representative of the Prussian Junkers.

Sees Effect on the Troops About Him

Hitler saw that this form of propaganda was having an effect upon the Bavarian troops about him.

During the next two years, Hitler was a routine soldier. The fear of death having passed, and the thrill of killing with it, resignation moved into the place once occupied by enthusiasm.

But his dreams of becoming a hero were not extinguished. Each time his company undertook some movement he strove to distinguish himself.

By that time German prowess had shifted the cards of war in its own favor.

Therefore, with the Germans able to concentrate upon the Western front, the time had come, they concluded, for the Allies to admit defeat.

Private Hitler was put on a train and hauled to the Somme, to which the scene shifted from Ypres. He arrived in good time for the big British offensive of 1918.

Read in tomorrow's Boston Evening American how Hitler was wounded and gassed.

Bible Is Cause of Auto Accident

Westerly, R. I., Aug. 20—When a Bible on the floor of his automobile was blown open by the wind, Albert B. Thomas, Jr., of Wakefield, leaned over to close it.

The car veered across the highway, crashed into a guard rail and landed in a ditch, narrowly missing another car.

CHARGES 'FAKE' ON HINDENBURG

By Associated Press

Paris, Aug. 20—The newspaper Paris Soir charged today that the will of the late President Von Hindenburg of Germany had been falsified so as to eliminate a recommendation that former Kaiser Wilhelm should "succeed" him.

The newspaper said the last section of the "will" was written by Paul Joseph Goebbels, Nazi minister of propaganda.

The newspaper said the original will was much longer than that published last week, lauding Chancellor Hitler, and advised Germany to make Wilhelm president and Franz Von Papen, now special envoy to Austria, as Chancellor.

Charges were made by the Soir that Von Papen, then vice chancellor, was named in the will before Hitler's "purging" of Nazi ranks June 30 and for this reason attempts were made to kil him.

The newspaper further says Von Papen later swore never to divulge he knew the contents of the will and ingratiated himself with Hitler by presenting the leader with the "faked" will.

Brennan Asks Free Usage of Tunnel

James H. Brennan of Charlestown, former member of the Governor's Council and candidate for the Democratic nomination for Congress against Congressman John J. Douglass, announced today he would ask Governor Ely to help make the $19,000,000 East Boston traffic tunnel a free state highway.

Brennan said the tolls to August 15 indicate an annual deficit of $600,000, and added that the end of the summer motoring season will be followed by a sharp decrease in tolls. He wants the Governor to advocate relief of the burden of taxation in Boston by legislative action which will make the tunnel a state highway.

Malden Temple Dedicates Ark

Dedication of the Ark of the Covenant, the gift of Mrs. Annie Newman and her seven sons to the synagogue Agudas Achim, took place last evening at sundown at the synagogue in Malden.

Rabbi Herman Bick presided and speakers included Mayor John D. Devir of Malden, ex-Mayor James M. Curley of Boston, Abraham Gold and Abraham Alpert, both of Boston. Isaac Katz, the new cantor, assisted in the religious services.

Overlooked in Subway

Barsy Varkas, 5, of 30 Ophir street, Jamaica Plain, was found in happy mood with her doll at her home today, after being "just missed" in the Cambridge subway. "Next time we'll count them," said George Varkas, this morning. He boarded a train at Central square with his wife and four of his five children. In a few minutes they noticed Barsy was missing. A hunt was started. Several hours later the girl was found at the ambridge police headquarters.

4,296,000 Defy Hitler by Voting Against Him

ample of such a manifestation of confidence by any nation to the chief of state. Hitler scored more than double the votes obtained by Hindenburg in the last elections."

The official announcement failed to add that Hindenburg happened to have a man running against him and that the man was Hitler, who on that occasion was beaten.

The last plebiscte, in November, 1933, asking the people to pass judgment on Germany's withdrawal from the League of Nations was on a question of policy. Yesterday's plebiscite asked the people to approve of Hitler's personal leadership—his succession of Hindenburg as president.

Both plebiscites presented the people with an accomplished fact, and all they could do was to say, "we agree," or "we don't," but not with the faintest chance of changing facts.

NO ATTACK ON JEWS

The German people have been persuaded that they live under the constant menace of war and that in order to prepare for defense they must, like soldiers in the army, submit themselves unanimously to the commander-in-chief.

One sure winner of the plebiscite is the German Jewry. It was the first time in Nazi history that a big campaign was put over without an attack upon or even a reference to the Jews. To judge from the campaign speeches, the foreign press has been chosen to take the place of the Jews as the anvil for the Nazi hammer.

The most remarkable thing shown by an analysis of the election figures is Hitler's strength among the former Communists. In Wedding and near the Alexanderplatz which were the strongest Communist districts in Berlin when the Workers' party scored almost 6,000,000 votes in a national election, Hitler received about 80 per cent of the votes.

In some of the best residential sections of Berlin he received only about 70 per cent.

STRONG IN FARM AREAS

In general Hitler received his strongest support in the agricultural areas, in Munich, where his movement started, and in East Prussia where the Junkers have their great estates.

He was weakest in the industrial cities of Westphalia, in the port of Hamburg, in Berlin and in Breslau and Frank-am-Main where there are large Jewish populations.

Revere Burglars Steal Stove, Radio

Safe breakers did fairly well in Chelsea over the week end, but in Revere they were a bit disappointed, and forced to reduce their loot ambitions to a radio and an oil stove.

Thomas F. Banister of 110 Porter street, Somerville, truckman for a store chain, was delivering produce in the rear of a store in Broadway Chelsea, early today, when he found the rear door open. Police found the store had been entered by ripping off a netting over a skylight and breaking the glass. The safe had been ripped open and company officials said $382 had been taken.

In Revere, the Boston Ice Co. office was entered by jimmying the rear door, but when the safe was pried open, only papers were found. The safebreakers took the stove and radio instead.

Youthful Acrobat Dying From Fall

A youthful amateur acrobat, John J. Buckley, 16, of Orange street, Chelsea, was on the danger list at Haymarket Relief Hospital today suffering from a fractured skull and other injuries.

Buckley was thrilling a group of children by daring stunts on the fence railing at the top of a three-story house on Prospect avenue, Charlestown, when he lost his balance and toppled 45 feet to the street.

BABY IS SLAIN BY GUNMEN

By Associated Press

Chicago, Aug. 20—Shot in the head as he sat with his baby brother in a little red wagon, two and a half year old Robert Pitts, Jr., died today in the South Chicago Hospital. A bullet had interrupted his happy command of "giddap, horseys," given to his parents.

The shot was fired by one of four men riding in a sedan. The parents, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Pitts, Sr., were imitating a team of horses for their children. As they drew the wagon down the sidewalk on Stony Island avenue near 90th street, the shot rang out.

Pitts said the seran sped south for a few blocks and disappeared around a corner. The father, a janitor, asserted that he had no enemies and that he did not think the killer was aiming at him.

BRITTEN BACKS U.S. MERCHANT MARINE

By Universal Service

Washington, Aug. 20—National defense forces in Congress today began organizing to combat efforts of Secretary of Agriculture Wallace to "plow under" the American Merchant Marine.

Wallace opposes continuation of government aid to United States shipping. He believes alien ships should deliver a large part of American exports on the theory that if you give foreigners money they will buy American products.

His views were disclosed in a letter to Representative Schuyler O. Bland of Virginia, Democratic chairman of the House merchant marine committee, who believes shipping is as much entitled to protection against cheap foreign competition as is agriculture and industry.

Representative R. A. Britten of Illinois, ranking Republican on the House naval affairs committee and its former chairman, was hastening here to take up the fight against abandoning aid for the ships under the Stars and Stripes, as suggested by Wallace in his effort to expand foreign commerce. Britten has been vacationing at Long Island, N. Y.

Through his office here he expressed "amazement" over Wallace's new policy toward the merchant marine. Britten, who holds that the merchant marine is necessary to national defense as an aid to our Army and Navy said:

"An adequate merchant marine is absolutely vital to national defense. Our shipbuilders and operators under the American flag cannot in many instances compete with foreign-flag ships heavily subsidized by foreign governments, unless our government gives financial air."

Los Angeles Leaders Attack Wallace Move

By Universal Service

Los Angeles, Aug. 20—Strenuous opposition to the stand of Secretary of Agriculture Wallace against expansion of the American merchant marine or continuation of federal aid for shipping was voiced today by congressmen representing Southern California.

Without exception, congressmen declared they believed the plea of allowing the American merchant marine to struggle alone in competition with foreign shipping would be a serious blow to the national defense of the United States, already far below the needs of the nation.

Mrs. Kahn Would Stop Wallace "Butting In"

By Universal Service

San Francisco, Aug. 20—San Francisco's Congressional representatives agreed today that Secretary of Agriculture Henry Wallace has his hands full with the agricultural adjustment administration's problems.

Congresswoman Florence Kahn said:

To this Congressman Richard J. Welch added:

"He's done a good job killing pigs and fallows—and we have a pork shortage. What does he know about the merchant marine?"

Franklin Sees Drive Against U. S. Navy

By Universal Service

New York, Aug. 20—New York city shippers and congressmen joined today in attacks on the proposal by Secretary of Agriculture Wallace to discontinue government aid for the American merchant marine.

John M. Franklin, vice-president of the International Mercantile Marine Co., declared Wallace's proposal would result in scuttling the auxiliary to the American navy at a time when President Roosevelt is planning to spend $400,000,000 to build up the navy itself.

Franklin said:

"Today the United States has the beginning of a fine fleet of modern vessels carrying American commerce to all ports of the world. These ships would not be in existence if it were not for the Jones White act under which government aid is given to American shipping.

"I would prefer to call it, as Mr. Hearst has in many of his editorials, 'protection for American shipping.'"

IF YOUR BREATH HAS A SMELL YOU CAN'T FEEL WELL

When we eat too much, our food decays in our bowels. Our friends smell this decay coming out of our mouth and call it bad breath. We feel the poison of this decay all over our body. It makes us gloomy, grouchy and no good for anything.

What makes the food decay in the bowels? Well, when we eat too much, our bile juice can't digest it. What is the bile juice? It is the most vital digestive juice in our body. Unless 2 pints of it are flowing from our liver into our bowels every day, our movements get hard and constipated and ⅔ of our food decays in our 28 feet of bowel. This decay sends poison all over our body every six minutes.

When our friends smell our bad breath (but we don't) and we feel like a whipped tomcat, don't use a mouthwash or take a laxative. Get at the cause. Take Carter's Little Liver Pills which gently start the flow of your bile juice. But if "something better" is offered you, don't buy it, for it may be a calomel (mercury) pill, which loosens teeth, gripes and scalds the rectum in many people. Ask for Carter's Little Liver Pills by name and get what you ask for. 25¢. ©1934, C.M.Co.

England Leads World in Economic Recovery, Declares Paul Block

(Paul Block, publisher of a number of important American newspapers, who is in Europe making a personal study of conditions there, sent the accompanying article to his newspapers.)

IN my desire to study at first hand, the economic and political conditions existing today in the important countries of Europe, I made it a point to interview not only men in government and business, but working people of all classes and it is the composite picture of what I found which I will relate. Naturally I cannot vouch for every statement which was made to me, but by interviews, followed by personal observations, make me believe that the views I shall express are close to the true conditions existing.

My first story is on England and will be followed by short articles about other countries, as soon as I can prepare them. P. B.

ENGLAND

London, July 27—I have been in England, I have spoken to members of Parliament, to businessmen large and small, and to workers. What did I find?

I found that a remarkable change had come over British life. Gone was the gloom of three years ago; gone was the feeling that Britain was on her last legs; gone was the dread of collapse.

THE CRISIS OF AUGUST, 1931—Three years ago Britain seemed faced with bankruptcy. "Withdraw your money from London" was the cry that resounded through the telephones of Wall Street, Paris and Berlin. "Sell your pounds, for the pound will crash!"

These prophecies of financial disaster had some justification. Foreign funds were fleeing in panic from the country. Every liner that sailed from Southampton had gold in its hold, which bankers were saving from the once mighty stronghold of world finance.

Government credit stood dangerously low, and stocks and bonds had sunk to levels which were alarming.

England was faced with a budget deficit of £74,000,000, approximately $370,000,000.

She was borrowing $250,000,000 per year to pay unemployment insurance. The debt of the unemployment fund had swollen to nearly $500,000,000.

IN England for over 20 years workers have been insured against unemployment. The worker has paid an average of about 9 pence per week (that is about 18 cents in our money); the employer pays an equal amount for each worker and the government pays the balance.

This is paid into the unemployment fund. Out of the unemployment fund there is given to the unemployed man or woman an insurance (sometimes called the "dole").

Thus an unemployed man (single) gets 17 shillings ($4.25) per week, a married man about $5.50 and for each child he receives about 75 cents a week.

After he has been unemployed for 26 weeks he is put on another rate of unemployment pay, which depends on how much money his family earns.

Up to 1931 the government was paying an ever-growing share of the unemployment fund, because the number of unemployed was mounting, and because there were fewer workers and employers paying their 18 cents a week. To pay the growing army of workless the government had to borrow money. By 1931 it was borrowing at the rate of $250,000,000 a year and the unemployment fund was $500,000,000 in debt.

That was the situation facing the government in August, 1931. The amount of money being paid to the unemployed was driving the country deeper and deeper into debt.

Taxation had gone up by almost $320,000,000 a year since 1929. Also since 1929 England's budget had been increased by more than $300,000,000. Then came the election of the parties forming the National government.

In October, 1931, nearly 500 Conservatives (out of a total of a little over 600 members of Parliament) were elected and they had a coalition with a part of the Liberal party and some of the Labor party, including Mr. Ramsay MacDonald.

These three groups (Conservatives, National Liberals and National Labor) formed the National government.

WHAT did the National government do when it took over this legacy of the Labor government?

It at once took drastic measures to cut down the expense of the government, including a reduction in the amount paid to the unemployed.

Slashing economies were made in many departments.

So successful was the economy that in 1934 the government was able to restore the unemployment benefit to the full amount of 1931.

EMPLOYMENT CONDITIONS—Since January, 1933, over 922,000 more workers have found employment.

In January, 1933, there were 9,265,000 persons employed in insurable occupations. In May, 1934, there were 10,187,000.

MORE PEOPLE ARE AT WORK IN BRITAIN TODAY THAN AT ANY TIME IN THE PAST 10 YEARS, WITH THE EXCEPTION OF THE LAST 10 MONTHS OF 1929.

"Industrial and Labor Information" gives the following comparison. Taking 1929 as 100 per cent, Great Britain's index of employment is higher than that of any other country. For every 100 persons working in Britain in 1929, there are now 99.7 working.

In Japan	95.2	France	76.8
U. S. A.	77.1	Italy	71.1

MONEY—Thanks to the drastic measures which the National government took to balance the budget, British finances seem as sound as they have ever been.

The budget surplus of 1933 was approximately $155,000,000, whereas Germany had a deficit of over $400,000,000, Italy of $375,000,000 and the United States approximately $4,000,000,000.

Taxes have been reduced since 1931 by almost $200,000,000.

LONDON STOCK EXCHANGE—There has been a great rise in government bonds, for example, 3½ per cent conversion loan, which were £77⅜ on August 31, 1931, are now £105 (July 27, 1934).

Industrial stocks have soared. Dividends have gone up.

Imperial Tobacco Company has raised (July 25, 1934) its dividend from 6½ per cent in 1933 to 7½ per cent.

Imperial Chemical Company raised its dividend from 4 per cent to 6 per cent.

The bank rate has been reduced from 6 per cent to 2 per cent.

HOUSING—Great Britain is in the middle of a housing "revolution." In 1933 266,000 homes were built in Britain, a record year.

London is changing. The slums are being attacked. Magnificent apartment houses are rising. The banks of the Thames are being given a new dignity by new office buildings. New factories are springing up almost everywhere.

EXPORTS AND HOME MARKETS

In June, 1933, Britain exported goods to the value of (approximately) $142,000,000.

In June, 1934, the exports were $160,500,000, but the improvement of export is slight. The real recovery is in the home market.

IRON AND STEEL

In 1933 Great Britain produced 7,022,800 tons of steel ingots and castings, an increase of 1,741,400.

In August, 1931, 365,811 workers in iron and steel were unemployed.

In May, 1934, 189,026, a reduction of 167,785.

ANTOMOBILES—There has been a tremendous expansion in the automobile trade.

Unemployment in automobile manufacture fell from 60,318 in August, 1931, to 22,681 in May, 1934.

In 1931, 19,532 English-made automobiles were exported; in 1933 the figures increased to 36,351.

Never have there been so many automobiles of luxurious design as in London today.

ENGINEERING—In August, 1931, there were 167,971 unemployed men in general engineering. In May, 1934, there were 85,536. One of the leading men of the British Air League stated: "The development of the aircraft industry in Britain is tremendous. Factories are working overtime. Orders are rolling in. Stocks have soared in value."

TEXTILES—Right now there is a decline in the textile industry, but production has increased substantially since 1931.

Taking 1924 as 100 per cent index of production

1931 showed	77.0%
1932 showed	85.1%
1933 showed	89.8%
1934 (first quarter)	96.3%

RETAIL SALES—The stores are improving their trade. Last Christmas was one of the brightest for many years and business is still going up.

Taking average daily sales for 1933 as 100 per cent the sales index number for all kinds of merchandise in May, 1934, was 108.

I talked with two of the largest department store owners in London. They explained that the government has not tried to tell them how to run their business. "The British Government has faith in our honesty and patriotism," one of these men stated, "and I know this confidence has helped our growth as well as the conditions of our 5000 employes."

STRIKES—While the United States is going through a period of strikes, there has been industrial peace in Britain. THE NUMBER OF DAYS LOST THROUGH INDUSTRIAL DISPUTES IN 1933 WAS THE SMALLEST RECORDED IN ANY YEAR SINCE THE WAR.

SOCIAL LIFE AND THE THEATER—The season this year, and especially at Ascot, was one of the gayest since the war.

There has been a wonderful recovery in the British theater. Last winter was one of the most prosperous seasons in years.

The British film industry is making giant strides and is becoming a serious competitor to the United States film industry.

BIG BEN—Big Ben, the most famous clock in the world, whose dignified boom from Westminster is heard over the radio in all parts of the globe, is being brightened up again. Thousands of Englishmen, as they pass the Houses of Parliament, look up at the burnished gilt which is now being put on it. Londoners state that Big Ben's rejuvenation is a symbol of the brightening up of Britain and a token of the British recovery.

THE OTHER SIDE—Lest the foregoing has given too bright a picture, it should be remembered that in June there was a slight check in the progress made and people are asking, "Has recovery halted?"

There are some pessimists in London who hold that there will be chaos in Europe and chaos in America and that as a result Britain will suffer.

Moreover, the situation in some areas of Britain is still tragic. Nevertheless, the recovery on the whole has been quite remarkable, and a new spirit of hope has spread through Britain.

O'DUFFY'S AID HURT IN RIOT

A mob estimated to number 1000 attacked the Midland Hotel, hurling rocks at the windows. They were political opponents of General Eoin O'Duffy's United Ireland party.

Forty Blueshirts staying at the hotel rushed into the streets and a savage encounter resulted.

Six Blueshirts were injured, among them being Captain Patrick Hughes, an aid of General O'Duffy. Hughes recently was released from Arbour Hill after a high court had overruled his conviction by a military tribunal on charges he had violated the official secrets act.

AUTO GIVES SIEGEL SLAYING CLUE

This Is Life
ROBERT E. ROGERS

One of the most clear-cut expressions of opposed opinions on the subject of what might be called the 'American' philosophy is to be found in the recent exchange of views on the New Deal between Professor Robert A. Millikan, president of the California Institute of Technology and internationally known physicist, and Monsignor John A. Ryan, for the past 30 years teacher of economics, director of the Catholic Welfare Council, and now a member of the new NRA Industrial Appeals Board

Robert E. Rogers

Father Ryan insists that Professor Millikan, in spite of his reputation as a physicist, is a has-been in political economy, since he still talks in terms of 19th century individualism. Dr. Millikan's radio address of a week ago asserted his belief that the rise of government control and regulation is destroying private initiative and presages the end of freedom and opportunity. In support of this position he quoted from Herbert Spencer's book, "The Coming Slavery," to which Father Ryan replied, "It is at least 25 years since that work has been cited with approval by any self respecting political scientist or economist. Herbert Spencer has been dead for a long time."

That is virtually what former Mr. Justice Holmes said some years ago when he declared the Constitution was not intended to enact Herbert Spencer's "Social Statics" into the law of the land, that volume being perhaps the most extreme statement of rugged individualism in all the literature of sociology.

Father Ryan bases his reply on the modern economic theories of the socialized state, although he denies that the word "socialist" is applicable. Also, of course, he bases it on the encyclicals of Leo XIII and of Pius XI. The latter said that "certain forms of property must be reserved to the state, since they carry with them an opportunity of domination too great to be left to private individuals without injury to the community at large." This quotation is in answer to Millikan's quotation from Spencer to the effect that "the proper functions of the state are in general regulatory, not operative."

"If that were true," answers Father Ryan, "the Federal government should forthwith hand over the postoffice to private initiative and the municipal governments should sell their water-works systems to efficient private corporations. The Federal government is beginning the operation of electric power systems in order to prevent by competition the extortionate practices of privately-owned systems. Professor Millikan is naive enough to believe that all such extortion can be prevented by government regulation.

"Dr. Millikan wants the American citizen to have the 'freedom and opportunity' to obtain as much power and influence as he can achieve through his own character, industry, and capacity. As every competent student of our history knows, the 'capacities' which have lifted a large proportion of our industrialists to the seats of the mighty have included cunning, ruthlessness, extortion, and oppression. These and only these are the kinds of 'freedom and opportunity' which the New Deal is striving to restrain. All his talk about Communism, Socialism, Statelsm is entirely irrelevant to the policies of our present national administration."

These quotations from an article in the New York Herald-Tribune show on both sides of the argument vigorous, sincere, and utterly incommensurable views. Dr. Millikan is still thinking in the terms of the social and educational atmosphere of his youth. Father Ryan has thrown the past overboard and has accepted the new sociology pretty much in toto. The one is purely individualistic, the other pretty completely socialized. About all that can be said, in terms of logic, is that Professor Millikan is at present entirely out of the fashion, Father Ryan very much in the fashion. Only time and experiment will tell which is right.

Personally I see no logical reason for insisting that the modern view is any more scientific than the 19th century. I object to Father Ryan's use of the word 'political scientist.' Politics, economics and sociology are not sciences in any exact sense of the word. The pure sciences involve uniformity and predictability. The pseudo or social sciences are incapable of both. They are empirical attempts to meet conditions.

If conditions change one theory is scrapped and another equally empirical is tried out to see if it will cover the new conditions and offer a working plan. The new one is no more and no less "scientific" than the old. And it is always possible that a turn of time's whirligig will make the old theory more useful and successful than the new. Both are, at bottom, only wish-fulfillments, the practical applications of opposed temperaments and notions.

In most cases all thinking of this sort is only a swing of the pendulum from something that is old and accustomed and imperfect to something that is new and attractive and untried. And a good deal of it is a matter of fashion and of mob psychology. At present the New Deal mob is in the fashion. We may live long enough to see the mob swing violently back to the fashion of Individualism. It all depends on whether the New Deal works. The pragmatic test is finally the only test.

I [illegible] suggest that logic and [illegible] is quite as much on Professor Millikan's side as on Monseignor Ryan's.

GOODWIN PLANS FOR BROADSIDE AGAINST ELY

By BERNARD J. DOHERTY

Frank A. Goodwin, ex-registrar of motor vehicles and three-way candidate for Governor, is preparing a broadside against Governor Ely.

"Governor Ely presists in being the candidate against myself and former Mayor James M. Curley for the Democratic nomination for Governor, so I guess I'll have to take care of him," Goodwin declared today.

Goodwin, it is understood, will go after" Governor Ely for sending state troopers into Brockton during the shoe strike. Goodwin was counsel for union workers at that time. Goodwin "mixed it up" with the Governor on that occasion when the Governor was quoted from Chicago as calling the East Boston man a labor faker.

CURLEY TO VISIT TAUNTON

With Governor Ely back from Maine, where he spoke in Auburn on invitation of Governor Louis J. Brann, the campaign of General Charles H. Cole was expected to put on more steam. Having delivered his initial attack on Curley at a Cole rally in Lee, the Governor, his intimates declare, is anxious to come to grips with the former Boston executive.

Hammering away on his chief issue—unwavering support of the Roosevelt administration—Curley tonight will address an organization meeting of the First Bristol senatorial district in American Legion Hall, Taunton. The former mayor will address another meeting in Sons of Italy Hall, Brockton.

WARE STARTS BATTLE

Aside from the campaigns of the 'Big Shots,' the novel activities of George L. Ware, who is challenging Representative Martin Hays of Allston in the Republican primary, is attracting attention.

Ware, who is well known in financial circles, was a strong supporter of Senator Henry Parkman, Jr., in the last mayoralty battle. Hays was active for former Mayor Malcolm Nichols. Aside from campaign issues there is no love lost between them.

In his original announcement, Ware declared that nobody asked him to run, and that neither the banks nor business will be adversely affected if he doesn't win. The usual thing for a candidate is to say just the opposite.

Now he has coined a slogan. It is based on the misspelling of his last name in reports made of his candidacy. Instead of Ware, his name appeared as Wate.

Here is the slogan: "George'll wate, George L. Ware better, and George'l win and dispel the 'Haze' from Ward 21."

PARADE VICTIM IDENTIFIED

A military funeral was being planned today for Abe Simons, 31, of Floyd street, Dorchester, assistant secretary to Lieutenant Governor Gasper G. Bacon, who died Saturday night in the Brockton police station and lay unidentified for more than 24 hours.

Simons was arrested as he watched the Legion parade. While he was being taken into the police station he began to struggle and police believed he was attempting to escape. Simons was taken to the Brockton hospital where he died a few hours later. Death was due to heart trouble, according to Dr. A. F. Badeski, medical examiner.

Simons had been active in veterans' organizations and was a past state commander of the Jewish War Veterans. He is survived by his widow and two children.

East Boston Boy Missing 5 Days

Mr. and Mrs. Anthony DeRuosi, of Drake place, East Boston, today expressed fear for the safety of their 12-year-old son, Anthony, missing from his home for five days. The child was last seen on the wharf near the South Ferry in East Boston where he sold newspapers, watching a group of firemen fishing. When he left home he was clothed in a dark gray sweater and brown pants, wearing no cap or necktie.

Few arrests for drunkenness marred the day, while police at Revere were successful in reuniting 60 lost children with their parents before nightfall. Thirty-five lost children were returned by Nantasket officials.

FARMER FIGHTS U. S. MILK BAN

Challenging the legality of the AAA's milk licensing plan and with it the foundation of almost all New Deal legislation, Edward M. Dwyer, South Weymouth farmer, appeared in federal court today before Judge Hugh D. McLellan.

In this first test case of its kind in New England, Dwyer denies the authority of the Secretary of Agriculture over the milk dealers of this section.

He asked that an injunction obtained by the Department of Justice to restrain him from doing a dairy business be dissolved. The writ was obtained after Dwyer's license was revoked by the Greater Boston Milk Marketing Authority.

It was disclosed that the sum of $4371, due Dwyer from the AA for his corn-hog reduction program may be held up pending disposition of the milk trial.

SLACKS BOTHER BRITISH FOLK

How "slacks," worn by two California school teachers on a bicycle tour through England, disturbed the good folk there was revealed when the Misses Esther Longfellow and Elvera Nelson disembarked here from the S. S. American Banker, of the American Merchant Lines.

Commenting on the reaction of the English people to their modern costume, Miss Longfellow said.

"I don't know what they would think of shorts. Yes, we saw the Prince of Wales, but we didn't get to meet him."

Two Men Slashed at Arlington Party

Police were today investigating the slashing of two men during a fight at a house party on Dudley court, Arlington.

The men, Frank Nano[illegible], 48, of Dudley court, Arlington, and Joseph D[illegible], 3[illegible], of North Cambridge, received dozen wounds about the head. The men refused to aid in identifying their attackers.

Woman Died in Bathtub

Miss Louise Goodrow, 76, of Oxford street, Cambrige, who was found dead in the bath tub of her home died of natural causes, it was announced by the medical examiner.

FEDERAL MEN PLAN RAID ON 'HIGHER UPS'

Investigation of the "riot" murder a week ago of Nate Siegel, Revere tavern owner and former boxing champion today widened in scope and became a concerted drive on gangsters by the combined forces of the state detectives and department of justice agents.

The federal forces, it was learned, are awaiting the call from state police to begin a cleanup of known gangsters in the North End and Revere and the higher-ups who have been directing gang-land activities.

The state detectives, Lieutenants John F. Stokes and Joseph L. F[illegible], called into the Siegel investigation by the Revere police, have identified the handwriting on the application made when the car which was used by Siegel's slayers was registered in Maine, it was learned today.

HANDWRITING CHECKED

The registration found on the slayer's car was issued on May 22 in Maine, under a fictitious name, but the handwriting, it is said, checks with that of a known gangster which is on file in the rogue's gallery at the state police headquarters.

Dismantling of the murder car by Sergeant John Canavan, expert of the automobile division of the state police, is believed to uncover a new gangland method of obtaining 'legitimate' registrations on stolen cars.

MOTOR PLATES SHIFTED

Police declare that motor numbers are taken from new cars while they are standing in sales show rooms and are transferred to the stolen car after the original numbers have been removed.

The car is then registered in Maine under the law which requires only the motor number and the signature of the owner.

BANDIT HUGS ROXBURY GIRL

Police of the Dudley street station, Roxbury, are today hunting a romantic boudoir intruder who entered the bedroom of Miss Anna Abramowcy, 25, of Kensington street, Roxbury, pulled the bed clothes from her bed, tried to embrace her, and then informed her that he meant no harm.

According to Miss Abramowcy, the intruder entered the bedroom through a window and was trying to embrace her when she awoke. Terrified, the girl tried to push him away, police say.

The man, described as being about 5 feet 5 inches tall and wearing a dark suit, put his finger to his lips and whispered:

"Don't be alarmed, I'm not going to hurt you. I am just fooling around a bit."

Miss Abramowey screamed and the intruder rushed to the window of the apartment, located on the first floor, jumped to the ground and ran down the street.

13th Lad Injured in Tree Tumbles

Lynd Petridge, 13, of Packard lane, West Quincy, is the 13th patient in two weeks to be treated at Quincy City hospital for injuries received due to a fall from a tree. Most of the children treated had been climbing trees for fruit when they fell.

In the artists' room of the broadcasting stations nightly is usually a tense figure of the first try on the air. Her fate is wrapped up in a few carefully timed moments. I saw one last evening, a pretty young thing with Katharine Hepburn bangs in evening wrap, moistening her lips, nervously clearing her throat and gazing hypnotically at a song she must know by heart. A page boy opens the door quickly, holds a hand up. Her time has come! A faint grateful smile and she hurries out quickly to keep her appointment with America!

New York friends of George Creel are interested in his California gubernatorial race. This recent ambition is another sudden soar in a many-sided, restless career. With the springy gait of a roulette ball and a mind as flirting as the otter he has filled more roles than almost any writing man of his time. Born on a Missouri farm, he edited a half dozen newspapers, was police commissioner in Denver for a hectic period, globe trotted extensively, has written a dozen books and is of course best known in his public information post during the war. His wife is the well known actress Blanche Bates. And he's a fair ringer for the ex-King of Spain.

These special tonsorial ministrations are for friends who, after a tough day at the office, drop in for a cocktail and are freshened into a well barbered glow. Manager League-Leading Detroit Tigers (As Told to Joe Cashman)

The Tigers appreciate the congratulations being showered on us all over the circuit. But we do wish that the fans would wait until congratulations are in order.

This race isn't over by any means. Our so-called commanding lead could be wiped out in a week. It's not probable, of course, but it's possible.

I've been reported as claiming the pennant. I haven't and won't until, if ever, it becomes a mathematical certainty. My players feel the same way about it. We're thinking only of winning today's game and fighting for every decision as though the championship depended on it.

Naturally, I must admit our chances of finishing on top appear bright at the moment. We spend the final month of the race at home, while the Yanks must finish on the road.

I've figured right along that if we could return to Navin Field with a lead of three games we'd be sitting pretty. I'd say that it's an even bet now that we'll go home that far in front.

The Red Sox are causing us trouble. We [illegible] for more in Philadelphia and Washington. Still, I think we have the class to gain the edge over these rivals. If we haven't, we don't deserve to win.

It may be recalled I said before the race started that I had a club which would be in the running all the way and might win out. Schoolboy [illegible] formed [illegible] credit my [illegible] hope [illegible] of the [illegible] hitters.

Hank Greenberg, Pete Fox, Jo-Jo White, Marvin Owen, Elden Auker and Luke Hamlin are among the most improved players in the majors.

Fenway Assumes Scenes Of the World Series; Hard Day for Summers

By AUSTEN LAKE

WELL, MY MANY LOVING FRIENDS, here was another Sabbath World Series setting at Fenway Park with the crowd pressed into the stands like layers of caviar on a canape cracker. In fact several hundred more souls were shoehorned into the park than came to say au revoir to Babe Ruth last Sunday.

Austen Lake

This was made possible by Secretary Phil Troy's clever scheme of having the overflow fans in right field stand sidewise instead of full face, and breathe in alternate gasps, odds and evens, so that their chest displacement was minimized. The three front rows of this crowd he formed like the ranks of the old British Square, lying, kneeling and standing.

And for the sake of comfort he would not allow the peanut butchers and refreshment vendors sell their wares, lest a single hot dog swallowed anywhere along the line would give the entire file a common stomach ache.

Mr Troy studied crowd handling in England last winter at the Wembley Stadium, where 100,000 people are fitted into a human log jam and standees at two shillings a head. He found that British promoters dovetail their customers by overlapping folk with double D stomachs next to types with no tummies at all, and 40 inch chests.

"It is perfectly humane," said Troy, "and practically painless after the first ten minutes, by which time the entire crowd is numb from the neck down."

THERE WERE ELEMENTS OF FLAMING drama in that first game in which Lefty Grove, the famous arthritis patient of the Red Sox, was more sinned against than sinning. His mates behind him did everything but lose the ball down their pants and generally acted like your little sister Minnie playing with the puppy.

It must have caused Lefty to do some inward shrieking and during the sixth inning when Carl Reynolds chased a high fly like a market porter with a case of eggs on his back he went to slamming his glove thoughtfully and after the inning retired to cool his fever under the clubhouse shower.

It was a roaring game of ball in which both sides trimmed the show with open public mutiny and an outbreak of profane swearing at Umpire Summers, who is a hammered down gent with a pigeon strut and a come-and-get-me air.

And once when Manager Bucky Harris came awhooping from the post of command and gathered with the Red Sox wage earners to speak cross words at Mr. Summers, Bill Cissell waited around quite a spell before he could break through Bucky's service and was just swinging into space when Bucky caught his breath and resumed, "Yeh and in addition—"

"Aw, hush a minute," said Werber, "and let a guy swear who knows how to swear."

"Did you ever hear this one?" asked Cissell, capering up and down. "This is a word I got from a first sergeant."

It must have been a good word because Summers thumbed Cissell out of there, although Bill insisted on resuming his position in the belief that the umpire would not have the effrontery to enforce his decree. And finally, when it looked as though the Army base would have to send a detachment of marines, Bucky Harris beckoned him away.

IT MAY BE THAT MR. SUMMERS FELT a little ashamed of this. Because later in the fourth inning he called Moose Solters of the Red Sox safe after he had been touched out by a space such as between Kendall and Harvard Squares.

And then out came Mickey Cochrane and his 20 Detroit lawyers and began hollering uncouth sayings and jabbing corkscrew fingers into Mr. Summers' eyes all over again.

Mickey's mama and papa were sitting close by the Detroit dugout, too, and it looked for a moment as though they would see their oldest boy wind up his Sunday punch. But the uprising was finally quelled and Mickey, who has never been put out of a ball game in his career—though I don't know why—ducked himself back in his dugout.

DOWN AT NARRAGANSETT THE HORSE track's syndicate of backers is bathed in surprise at the generous way New England, and principally Boston, folk are stuffing their money through the parimutuel hutches.

Mort Mahony, who holds the title of "Betting Director" at half a dozen American race tracks, says he was amazed, nothing short, at the lavish spending at Rockingham. But he is "stunned," to use his own word, at Narragansett.

In 1[illegible] days of racing Narragansett has handled $[illegible]4,112, nearly a million ahead of Rockingham for the same period in the recent meeting.

Racing men generally predict that as soon as the novelty of open betting wears off in New England the handle will drop sharply. Which may be next year when Massachusetts legalizes parimutuel wagering and finds, probably, that New Hampshire and Rhode Island have skimmed the top off the bottle.

Popularity of Sox Proves Fenway Too Small

"You're Out," the Umpire Cried to Make 50,000 Sox Rooters Groan

Here is one of the thrilling plays in the double-header at Fenway Park which attracted 5[illegible],000 from various New England points for the Sox-Tiger duel. It came in the [illegible] inning of the opening game with Lyn Lary making a desperate effort to score on Max Bishop's grounder to Hank Greenberg. Greenberg's throw caught Lary at the plate, catcher Hayworth tagging him after Lyn had slid into the plate in a swirl of dust. Staff Photos.

Except for stage work, including that adagio dancing, and for appearances [illegible] Jack [illegible] followed closely [illegible] footsteps of Nick and made him an example, athletically.

They both played football, swam and wrestled for good old U. S. C. Both boxed as amateurs; both were lifeguards at Venice, Cal.; both were amateur champion wrestlers on the Coast—and finally both became professional matmen.

WITH REGINALD DENNY

But in between, Jack, of the [illegible] shoulders, and [illegible], also admitted today he began taking dancing lessons secretly. It was [illegible] he was a lifeguard at Venice. Eventually came the chance to make his stage debut.

All was very secret.

"And when I looked out over the footlights," said Jack, grinning, "there were a line of my pals, about 20 of them. All were seated in the front row. All had their arms crossed, right up under their chins. And they all had phoney frowns on their faces, deep, scowling frowns. You could have knocked me over with a ladder truck.

"When I came out of the theater, the whole line minced by with sweet smiles. There were Myron Cox, greatest long distance ocean swimmer alive; Wally O'Connor, a coast champion, lifeguards and all the rest of the boys—and they were having a swell time kidding me."

But if his pals kidded Jack's showshop aspirations the bookers did not. Jack has done movie comedy work, was with Reginald Denny in "The Collegians"; was [illegible] other pictures and [illegible] stock or [illegible] a black [illegible]

WRESTLER'S HOME LIFE

This opus, "Three Jacks and a Queen," played Boston a year ago last week, with the girl, Miss Ann Sullivan of Boston. Jack Starns Lutze clipped off the last of his three names for the theater and was billed as Jack Starns.

He has managed 12 theatrical [illegible] in his time [illegible] acts of 30 or 40 people—and he's still only a lad, four years younger than Nick.

Jack Lutze quit the stage because he likes wrestling better.

"It's a lot easier holding girls up than wrestlers down," he said today, "but I'm all for the ring."

And so Jack goes into the Arena again next Wednesday at Alex McLean's show, carrying all Nick's assortment of pet holds and a few of his own.

CARLISLE WINS HEARST CUP

By Universal Service

Chicago, Aug. 20—A young man from East Islip, L. I., Lewis Carlisle, who foreswore an expense-paid trip across the Atlantic to Italy to settle for a series of ripping, roaring, [illegible] roaring circuits of a [illegible] laid out in the waters of the south lagoon of a Century of Progress, yesterday annexed the William Randolph Hearst gold cup.

His point total at the end of the day was 2250, far ahead of his nearest competitor.

DENSE CROWD

And densely packed around the entire lagoon and on all the vantage points of buildings adjacent, a crowd that was numbered by tens of thousands and grew steadily as more than five hours of the Herald and Examiner's [illegible] were [illegible] speed [illegible] champ[illegible]

From the first race [illegible] the [illegible] took place at the dinner hour, Carlisle did not leave the issue in doubt. In the very first race, when he won in the A1 class, he took the play not only away from the defending champion and yesterday's second place winner, Horace Te[illegible], Chicago's two-time winner of this regatta, but from all the rest of the country's greatest outboard devotees among the [illegible]

As the afternoon went its roaring way this lad, who came close to winning last year and failed, added to his lead with fine determination, finer skill and headwork, and made good his decision that, for all of the Power Pal Association's wish to send him to Italy in the interest [illegible] he had some unfinished business to attend to in the third annual William Randolph Hearst's Gold Cup regatta.

ROSEBUD STARS PRACTICE FOR NIGHT GAME

By Bob Ahearn

Freddy Maguire, playing manager of the Northeastern League All-Stars, who meet the House of David in a floodlight game at Braves Field tomorrow evening, planned a two-hour workout for his squad at Wayland today.

The pick of the eight league clubs is converging on Roger Baker's grounds for the practice session.

Acclaimed by those who have seen [illegible] as the finest possible, the $15,000 lighting equipment, property of Baker, will be given its first tryout in a big league ball park [illegible]

For his mound staff, Maguire can call on Jerry Gruenwald and Buddy Lake of the Worcester Rosebuds, both of whom went South with the Braves last spring; Cy Waterman and Jackie Casey, Watertown aces; Bob Walsh, son of Big Ed, and Mike Nash of the Wayland entry; Lefty Gay, Hartford, and Justin McLaughlin, Manchester.

Starting time for the main game will be 9 p. m. Two local semipro clubs will furnish the opposition in a preliminary tilt carded for 6 o'clock.

Jordan Marsh and the Caseys square off tonight in the fourth game of the Park Department League final series at Garvey Field, Neponset. In the games played to date the Retailers have won two, while the third game ended in a 1 to 1 tie.

Hebert or Bird will start on the mound for Jordan's. Dick Casey will pin his hopes on Charlie O'Hara, if the scholastic ace is given the O. K. by the doctor.

Watertown, of the Northeastern League, plays the Fraser All-Stars in an exhibition floodlight game at Lynn Stadium this evening. Both clubs met once before, with the Fraser nine on top, 8 to 6. The game went 21 innings and is believed to be the longest ball game ever played under arc lights.

Semifinal playoffs in the Park Department Junior League were to be staged at Fenway Park today through the courtesy of Eddie Collins and Tom Yawkey. Four games in all were to be played, two in the morning, the others in the afternoon.

Cross, Able M. G. A. Head, About to Retire—Mason His Likely Successor

By Bill Grimes

Realizing that he will relinquish his office at the end of the season, it was with deepest regrets that I watched Charles H. Cross, president of the Massachusetts Golf Association, drive out of the Oakley Country Club last Tuesday, after Gerald Anderson, Tatnuck, had successfully defended his caddy championship, the final titular event on the M. G. A. schedule.

Cross has been president of the M. G. A. for two years. From the start he showed himself to be a fair and fearless executive. Equally as important, he was an organizer of uncanny ability.

A member of The Country Club for many years he had no social aspirations when he took over office during his term of office.

Appreciating the value of capable assistants during state championships he selected C. E. Mason, Cohasset, Jerome A. Turre[illegible], Woodland, Joseph A. G[illegible], Brae Burn, and John P. S[illegible], C[illegible], Winchester, as his chief aids. And they all lived up to the faith their president placed in them.

REGULATES CADDY PLAY

During his two years as chief executive, Cross introduced numerous innovations, which, if continued, will greatly benefit not only the game itself but also the M. G. A. and its member clubs.

For years, the second rounds of all caddy championships were a wild scramble. Cross had made a careful study of caddy and junior championships. He was in a position to recognize any and all weaknesses in these events. In fairness to all, he limited the afternoon field in the recent caddy championship to players who had carded 88's or better during the morning round.

It was indeed fortunate that he had the foresight to establish this precedent; otherwise it would have been impossible to get the large field through two rounds.

Moreover, it was a protection to the low boys of the morning round.

BARRED TWO FOREVER

For two years, he has visited the M. G. A. office almost daily. He was always in close touch with all angles of the game, unlike some of his predecessors [illegible] took advantage of Freddie Corcoran's knowledge of what was going on [illegible] circles.

A year ago, during the unfortunate affair in which two golfers were alleged to have turned in incorrect cards, Cross lost no time rendering a decision, which barred these players from all future M. G. A. tournaments.

In the past, other M. G. A. presidents had been in almost the identical position but they failed to perform [illegible] Cross had the courage which the others lacked.

On the other hand he gathered the strongest of all time Bay State Lesley Cup teams a year ago which went to Montreal and was the first Massachusetts team to win away from home in years.

Charlie Cross did his bit for golf and the M. G. A., and his passing is to be regretted. He will probably step out of office this fall, in favor of Charles E. Mason, Cohasset, the present secretary.

And from what I have seen of Mason he will prove a worthy successor to Charles H. Cross, a strict and fearless but fair executive.

WARRIORS MAY FACE DIZZY TOMORROW

St. Louis, Aug. 20—Thwarted in their efforts to close in on the third place Cardinals, the Boston Braves [illegible] in preparation for the final contest of their four-game series here tomorrow.

Manager Bill McKechnie blamed bad pitching for the two defeats by the Cardinals. He pointed out that the second game of the Sunday double-header, which was taken by the Red Birds, 3-1, was lost in the first inning when Flint Rhem, the ex Cardinal, was pounded before he had really warmed up.

Asked for his pitching selection for tomorrow, McKechnie shrugged his shoulders and wrinkled his brow.

"That's a real problem," he admitted. "I had been counting on Frankhouse, but Fred pulled a muscle in his left side his last time out. If he isn't ready by tomorrow, well, I don't know who will pitch."

Dizzy Dean, who appeared before Judge Landis today with his complaint against the Cardinals, may work for the Cards. If Dizzy isn't in line, his brother, Paul, who was touched for the winning run in the ninth inning of Sunday's first game, will be given another opportunity to face the Braves.

That was one of the most hectic [illegible] seen in St. Louis this season. The Cards spotted the [illegible] seven runs, fought an uphill battle, finally tying the score [illegible] 9-9 in the eighth. Then a pass to Jordan, followed by Berger's double and Lee's long fly, scored the winning run for the Braves in the ninth.

NEW FLAG IS WILSON'S BEST BET AT NARRAGANSETT TODAY

Princess of the Courts Congratulates Queen Helen as a Tennis Dynasty is Continued for Third Season

Helen Jacobs is showing the power of her backhand return which enabled her to defeat Sarah Palfrey of Brookline in the finals of the national women's tennis singles.

Tennis finalists, a pair of the ranking women players in the country, clasp hands in a fine spirit of sportsmanship as Sarah Palfrey congratulates Queen Helen on the latter's triumph at Forest Hills. It was Helen's third successive triumph in the American court classic.

There is power and grace to Sarah Palfrey's return of a hard drive, as shown here, but she failed to scale the heights in her match with Miss Jacobs. (Pictures by International News Photograph Service.)

SARAH PALFREY DISAPPOINTS IN FINAL

By John R. Tunis

By Universal Service

Forest Hills, N. Y., Aug. 20.—A singles championship of the United States is after all a championship, but candor forces me to confess that the final match between Miss Jacobs, the holder, and Sarah Palfrey, the challenger, was a disappointing affair and one was more disappointing even than the score, 6-1, 6-4, indicates. For the most part the contest was not a contest. With few exceptions the exchanges lacked sparkle.

Miss Jacobs played well, with the [illegible] as she always does in her important matches, but Miss Palfrey played badly at times, worse at others.

Only for the few games in the second set when she worked into a 4-2 lead was she the strong resilient girl who defeated Peggy Scriven and Dorothy Round at Wimbledon.

I think all tennis players in the stands were disappointed in the match. Frankly, the whole week has been below the level of former years both in the quality of play and in exciting matches.

Miss Jacobs is a worthy champion. She is the best player in the United States by all odds and possibly the best in the world. But only once last week, against Mrs. Mary Greef Harris in the third round, was she really pressed.

It is monotonous to watch even the best player in the world bowl over opponents set after set.

It was Miss Jacobs' third straight national singles triumph.

After their singles duel, Misses Jacobs and Palfrey teamed to defeat Dorothy Andrus and Carolin Babcock, 4—6, 6—3, 6—4, in the doubles championship final.

Lulu Lite, Par Value, Polly Cee, High Glee Also Should Win

the outstanding wagering proposition here this afternoon.

The Greentree [illegible] finished third behind Happy Helen and Morning Mail in her lone [illegible] this course, but she was a victim of poor racing luck in that affair.

At the break, she was a bit tardy in leaving and was forced to use the more treacherous footing on the rail, but she quickly found her stride and had forged into a [illegible] lead as the field left the backstretch.

FIRST RACE

Lulu Lite, Lealette, Colorist

LULU LITE came up a good thing to defeat Home Loan and that sort in her only outing over this course. The Claiming [illegible] broke a bit slowly in that race but was right in the thick of contention as the field left the backlane. Going around the turn, Jockey Arcaro tried to sneak through on the rail, but was badly powdered and forced to take up. By the time his mount recovered the race was practically over. With clear sailing he may dub this ordinary lot.

LEALETTE is evidently held in high regard by his owner or else he would not have been running him in handicaps and stakes. His third behind Little Dinah and Maddening make him a dangerous. COLORIST is now in the Jersey stable. Mayhap he will show to better advantage.

SECOND RACE

Par Value, Playing On, Cabouse

PAR VALUE, PLAYING ON and CABOUSE all figure right together in this affair. However, I'm going to tempt fate by rating them as named. Par Value and Playing On raced over a distance of ground last out and those efforts may be discarded. In a previous effort Par Value [illegible] home Cash Surrender and other fleet ones at six furlongs. Playing On won his two previous races over the same route. In one he defeated Fred Almy while in the other he drubbed Gay Banner. Cabouse has been finishing close up in better company.

THIRD RACE

Polly Cee, Banners Flying, Manager Bill

POLLY CEE is stepping up a bit in this company but she looks capable of handling the issue. Last out, she was returned a handy winner over Cold Spill and that sort. BANNERS FLYING is dropping down from a $2000 top and bottom affair, but he finished far back in that race. In a previous outing he drubbed an ordinary lot of $1500 plater over the six furlong route. MANAGER BILL has been racing [illegible] in his starts over this course and looks next best. Last out the Bedwell-trained thoroughbred finished second to Fair Maid.

FOURTH RACE

New Flag, Happy Helen, Scotch Queen

NEW FLAG should make every [illegible] of his journey a winning one. HAPPY HELEN's score over the top one last out makes her [illegible] the one to fear. SCOTCH QUEEN, a fast working [illegible] in the C. T. Grayson stable, [illegible] been [illegible] since the Maryland meetings and has a [illegible] race. In her only two starts in the Free State she finished second and then came right back to take brackets.

FIFTH RACE

High Glee, Chinese Empress, Gift of Roses

HIGH GLEE has been a hard luck mare at this meeting. But for poor racing luck, she would have won her last two starts. Last out she was installed an even money chance over this same sort of opposition and was all but knocked down during the running. With clear sailing I believe she is capable of handling a field of this sort. CHINESE EMPRESS was only beaten a nose by the top one in their last meeting and shapes up the more dangerous of the contenders. GIFT OF ROSES was another that had a rough trip last out. On past dope, she figures close up.

SIXTH RACE

Gaillardia, Cohort Miss, Adobe Post

GAILLARDIA strikes me as having a decided edge in this affair. The J. D. Mikel colorbearer set a blistering pace for almost a mile in the Fort Adams stakes before giving way within sight of the wire last out. Over at Rockingham he just breezed over this same distance to this same sort. COHORT MISS was raced into condition at Saratoga and shipped over here probably for a killing. Last fall at Maryland, she drubbed the best juveniles that could be mustered over a distance of ground. ADOBE POST displayed surprising improvement to drub Red [illegible] and Curacao. Off that race, he looks like a cinch for third money.

SEVENTH RACE

Lofty Lady, Kindacorn, Rock Point

Unless the old handicapper is sadly mistaken, LOFTY LADY will take the top and her rider will be looking back during the entire mile and one-sixteenth of the journey. Her previous races over this course may be thrown out as Jockey [illegible] tried to rate her behind the pace in all of them. According to my dope, she is a front running mare and won't try to run an inch when [illegible]

IMPORTANCE OF SILVER PLAN MINIMIZED

The first question that confronts [illegible] with money [illegible] the importance of sil-[illegible] perhaps the [illegible] perplexing [illegible] opportunity [illegible] Wash-[illegible] with the detached air of a vacationist con-[illegible] while the fu-[illegible] ent is not to be exaggerated.

Jesse H. Jones

For the time being we do not be[illegible] it will be used as an important [illegible]. In our studies of inflation we will devote plenty of time and space to the relation of the federal debt to bank credit, because there is likely to come a time when [illegible] and then the prospect of a sudden whirlwind inflation will be really frightening.

One thing that has happened during the past two weeks that is not to the liking of conservatives is the swing away from orthodox counsellors. When one stops to consider this, the chance of a conservative appointment to the governorship of the Federal Reserve must be minimized. It now looks as though Jesse H. Jones, staunch supporter of the administration, would get the job. Whether he gets the appointment or not, we will be inclined to watch for aggressive steps by Mr. Jones to mobilize bank credit either through the Federal Reserve or through the Reconstruction Finance Corporation.

Taking the list as a whole there is no apparent reason for becoming excited about the buying side in here. Rather would we prefer to await the orthodox test of the lows of late July. Then we will know where we stand. Caution at this time is prompted by more than a bare desire to be right. For if the lows of July give way easily it will look for all the world as though we had entered a bear market in equity prices. From where we sit the verdict of the market itself must be awaited.

Briefs: The big point made by bulls is that never in stock market history has the market broken down out of a protracted sidewise movement such as we have witnessed in the past 15 months . . . This is 100 per cent true but then again the market never was operated under a set of rules such as we now have . . . This might change the picture somewhat radically . . . In any event it will not do us a great amount of harm to sit down on the sidelines quietly for a while.

A development which may mean a great deal to the stock market is apparently in the making. Reliable advices coming to the writer indicate that strong European pools are to be formed to operate in American markets. Whether or not these pools or syndicates have the backing of big operators in this country is pure conjecture. Another moot question is what power the securities commission will have over them. At the moment the list of stocks singled out for attention does not include any selling over $30.

Wall Streeters In Gloomy Mood At Start of New Week

By WALL STREET SPECTATOR

[illegible] week opens [illegible] again [illegible] about [illegible] pick up [illegible] the trend of the market itself.

Everyone would like to see a rise for a while since it is easier to get sustained volume on the upside. However, stocks haven't shown much of anything for several days, though their inability to carry through on the advance has brought considerable disappointment.

The oil industry is in a critical position as far as legislation is concerned.

The rush to adjourn alone prevented passage of new laws at the last session of Congress; and it is obvious that if the price structure is permitted to become demoralized in the next few months this will enhance the drive for strict control next year . . . Many in the industry are opposed to further federal legislation.

The hope is that the East Texas field, where pressure is declining steadily, will be forced on the pump before next spring . . . This would curb the "hot oil" evil more than anything else, since the cost of producing crude would rise considerably.

Predictions are that railroad earnings in July will be better than expected.

This will reflect drastic reduction in maintenance expenditures and others economies . . . Only a moderate shrinkage will be relatively favorable since rail earnings in July last year were very good . . . Reports will come out in volume toward the end of the week.

The street is estimating that steel operations will fall well under 20 per cent. Before the turn comes possibility of a shutdown toward Labor Day is a factor.

MARKET VIEWS OF BROKERS

Paine, Webber & Co.—The recently narrowing trading range should give way to a definte outbreaking of prices in one direction or the other within a day or so. Suggest deferring new trading purchases for the time being. Would regard a penetration of last week's highs on increased volume as a bullish signal for trading purposes.

Hornblower & Weeks—Should the irregularity that began in the latter par of Friday's session fail to bring about any renewed selling, the market may make another attempt to move into new high ground from the July lows.

Shields & Co.—Some expectation of business pickup after Labor Day may be reflected in the stock market over the next few weeks. However, unless indications change, resultant flurries will be temporary as the trade line indicates it will follow the course of a year ago. These movements will afford trading opportunities but it will be unwise to follow them too far.

J. S. Bache & Co.—For several weeks now, the low level established in late uJly and tested on several occasions early this month has proven a sturdy resistance area. That foundation would appear to be sufficiently solid to support an attempt toward a higher objective than those reached during the past few weeks.

G. M.-P. Murphy & Co.—It continues difficult to make many suggestions to traders, factors on both sides being so numerous. The leading writer on the Dow Theory states he is buying for speculation, but will cut losses if the lows of eary this month are broken. That might be a good idea if volume does not increase on further weakness.

FINDS BRITAIN USING UP ITS WEALTH

By B. C. FORBES

The American visiting Europe and talking with people of various nationalities, returns home convinced that the whole world has become more or less topsy turvy as measured by pre-war standards.

The net impression is distinctly disquieting.

Take Britain.

We have been repeatedly told of the substantial economic recovery made there. We have been told that Britain is far ahead of America in solving depression problems.

Having been reared to manhood in Britain and therefore able to make comparison I cannot become enthusiastic over the conditions I found there.

Two major developments impressed me as most unfavorable.

First, I could not avoid the disquieting conclusion that Britain, the British government, is living to an alarming extent on the fat, the wealth, accumulated during the century preceding the World War.

Second, the qualities which made the British nation great, including industriousness, ambition, frugality, serious mindedness, self denial, aversion to accepting charity, have become tragically weakened.

What has happened throughout the United Kingdom was illustrated by a view from one hotel: an enormous, historic castle which was intact on my previous visit had been abandoned, wrecked, its roofless walls radiating ghastliness.

The explanation?

To escape the dreadfully heavy taxation now levied in Britain, the owners of any building must destroy its roof.

Whereas the line of earls formerly owning this castle and the extensive lands from which they drew rent, had lived most of the year in the castle and devoted their lives mainly to carrying on helpful activities among the people, thereby winning intense affection, the present youthful earl, his income drastically injured by taxation and the impaired condition of his former tenants, elected to abandon the ancestral home, live in London and indulge in a useless life.

I learned of countless titled families who had had to abandon their ancestral country castles or tear them wholly or partly down and move to cities, thus largely uprooting their old time place in the communities.

Thus is unbearably heavy taxation bringing about a far-reaching change in the social structure of Britain.

Death duties—inheritance taxes have become so terrifically heavy that instance after instance is recorded of wealthy families being fatally impoverished by two or more deaths in rapid succession. The newspapers, while I was there, recorded one case of a huge fortune being almost totally wiped out by the death, first, of the head of the family, and by the death shortly thereafter of his widow.

I could not but conclude that the British government has been able to carry on by confiscating fortunes accumulated under the old economic and social order.

But relatively few new fortunes, nautrally are being created.

Therefore, the prospect is that the day will come when taking money from the rich to distribute it in doles to the unemployed and for other costly "social" governmental purposes will no longer be possible.

Although most of the substantial Britons I talked with express confidence that the nation's troubles have been effectively overcome and that Britain has a future as "glorious" as her past, I cannot avoid feeling that they are mistaken.

The majority of the younger generation are not possessed by the seriousness of purpose, the dogged determination, the spirit of thrift and self reliance animating their fathers and forefathers.

The attitude they display is "let us eat, drink and be merry today; the government takes care of us now if we don't work and will take care of us if need be for the rest of our lives."

Is the American government of today in danger of adopting policies calculated to bring about somewhat similar notions?

N. Y. Bank Stocks Decline in Week

New York City bank stocks recorded a moderate reaction during the past week. The aggregate value of sixteen leading issues, according to records compiled by Hoit, Rose & Troster, totaled $1,408,837,000 on August 17, as compared with $1,445,985,000 at the close of the previous week, a decrease of $37,149,000, or 2.57 per cent.

The current average yield of the sixteen issues of 5.68 per cent, compares with a yield of 5.53 per cent on August 10. The current market value is now 1.15 times their known book value, unchanged for the week, and based upon current figures the sixteen issues are now quoted at an average of 10.0 times their known earnings, against 10.3 times at the close of the previous week.

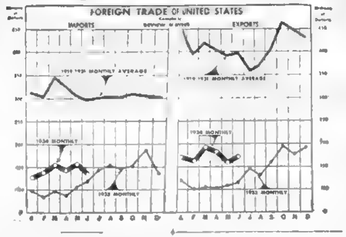
Foreign Trade Studied



By JOSEPH STAGG LAWRENCE

This chart covers the foreign trade of the United States and is presented in such a manner that it is possible to compare the course of imports and exports during the last year and a half with a line that may be considered the normal line of foreign trade.

Certain facts stand out. In the first place, there was a consistent excess of exports over imports during the period selected as the base, viz., 1919-1931. This excess represents the so-called favorable balance of trade which foreign nations obtained, largely, as subsequent analysis has proved, on credit.

Roughly we may say that for every three dollars of goods which the United States imported, it exported four dollars worth. This favorable balance of trade has always been a source of gratification to chambers of Commerce and certain types of business analysts who could see no inconsistency in a continuing favorable balance of trade. These students did not seem to appreciate that the difference would have to be paid for at some time, in terms of goods, services, or precious metals.

Precious metals are quite out of the question since America has already accumulated as much of the world's gold as other governments are willing to surrender, and services in the form of tourist travel, freight and insurance, have suffered for a variety of reasons.

Any inclination of Uncle Sam to lower his tariff barriers to permit a larger inflow of goods at once raises a storm of protest from domestic producers who claim, with unanswerable logic, that they cannot compete with foreign producers not subject to code wages and hours while they are themselves forced to pay the higher levels demanded by the codes.

Although the volume of exports for the first six months of the current year is still slightly above the volume of imports, the margin between the two has shrunk perceptibly. In fact, taking 1933 as a whole, the favorable balance has declined almost to the vanishing point.

Shoe Retailers to Be Tested in Germany

Only responsible adults who are properly trained will be permitted to sell footwear in Germany if the German Shoe Dealers Association has its way, according to advices from the American consulate-general, Frankfort-on-Main, made public by the Commerce Department.

The association, the report states, at a recent meeting adopted a resolution to that effect and legislation will be requested to put the plan in operation.

The chamber of commerce and industry of Munster recently went a step further in this direction and ruled that all persons in the future who want to operate a retail shoe business should be required to pass a special examination showing their fitness for the business. The chamber has taken steps with the proper authorities to have this ruling given the force of an official regulation.

An examining commission has been set up consisting of a disinterested chairman and two shoe merchants, with the provision that no person shall be eligible to serve on the commission who might be regarded as a possible competitor to the applicant for examination. The examination may be dispensed with if the applicant furnishes proofs of having had the usual apprenticeship and a number of years of independent business experience.

BUSINESS RISE MODERATE IN ENGLAND

This is the second of a series of articles by Julius G. Behrens, Universal Service financial writer, on the economic outlook in foreign countries. Mr. Behrens has just returned from abroad, where he made a careful study of the business activities.

By JULIUS G. BEHRENS
Universal Service Financial Writer

New York, Aug. 20—The moderate upturn in business activity in England, which some people have exaggerated into a boom, is due primarily to two factors:

When I was in London this summer the city was packed with tourists. Three of the most popular priced hotels were jammed to capacity and reservations had to be filed days and weeks in advance to secure accommodations.

Not many American tourists are there, but a great many Germans. The Germans were by far the most numerous of all foreigners. In England—throughout Europe—the Germans are traveling in large numbers.

They obviously are running away from the mark. Some of them probably are getting their movable capital out of Germany by any means at their command, regardless of the severe restrictions against such export of capital. Some Germans apparently are just anxious to get rid of marks, fearing what may happen in their homeland.

But to return to English conditions, spending by tourists has given London trade a stimulant. This, with the benefit of the depreciated pound, provides the basic background for the upturn which England has experienced.

Outside of London, in the great manufacturing centers of England and Scotland, the depression is still very much evident.

Only a slight dent has been made in England's army of unemployed.

The editor of one leading newspaper boasted to me that "nobody is starving or begging here." Well, there are plenty of beggars and starvation is staved off by the dole. The editor admitted this but said the dole is cheaper in the long run than what the United States is attempting.

England not long ago increased the dole distributions and this was cheered by many as evidence of the national betterment. Another version, however, was furnished by a thinking young person who remarked:

"It's just another bone to the downtrodden; the government throws out talk of great improvement in conditions but this is mostly for effect, to keep the lower classes satisfied."

There is no question but that sentiment in England is vastly improved. Business has been better in spots, but still lags far behind any kind of normal. In England a 5 per cent pickup in retail business, even from the depression dregs, is hailed as a most satisfactory development. In the United States a much greater improvement would be necessary to bring a cheer from the business community.

The British government, especially through the chancellor of the exchequer, who corresponds to our secretary of the treasury, has frequently boasted of great strides forward. This in large part is responsible for the belief that England has been enjoying a boom.

(Another article in this series will follow.)

Trade Activity Lags While Farm Prices Advance

By International News Service

New York, Aug. 20—While prices of farm products and foods advanced measurably, production and trade fell off more than seasonally in July and the first two weeks of August, according to the monthly report of the national industrial conference board.

Productive activity which showed visible recessions in recent weeks included the automobile output, building construction, steel and iron production, and the textile output. All declines, however, were still above the figures for the same period last year. The automobile output, which declined 16 per cent from the June total, was 15 per cent larger than the total in July last year.

July steel production was cut to half the June total, the output of 1,473,000 gross tons being the lowest since April, 1933. Steel operations during July fell to 26.8 per cent of capacity as compared with 52.7 per cent for June.

Whoesale commodity prices rose 0.4 per cent to the July index of 74.8 from 74.5 in June, the base of 100 being derived from 1926. The cost of living index for July also advanced 0.4 per cent.

Prices of department store items were 2 per cent lower in July.

Prices of department store items were 0.2 per cent lower in July than in June, but 17.7 per cent above the level of July, 1933.

STEEL OUTLOOK UNCERTAIN

Seven weeks have elapsed since consumers stocked up with steel and the failure of new demand to appear long after the time anticipated, coupled with widespread labor difficulties and increasing uncertainties regarding government policies, is exerting a pronounced depressing influence in the markets, states the magazine Steel.

Scanning the immediate horizon, steel makers can see only prospects for additional government work and some revival in automobile requirements.

Automobile output, continuing to decline, last week was slightly under 54,000 cars, though the recession is meeting with unusual resistance, the reduction in output from the week of July 14 being only 20 per cent.

Though actual steel bookings so far this month are larger than for the comparable period in July, orders chiefly are for rounding out inventories. In some districts the volume is 50 per cent larger, though tonnage is far below anticipated quotas. Current shipments are one-fifth to one-fourth those of June.

Steel operations last week dropped six points to 21½ per cent. Pittsburgh was down four points to 15 per cent; Chicago four points to 28 per cent; Wheeling 4 to 26 per cent; Cleveland 19 to 13 per cent; Buffalo 9½ to 23½ per cent; eastern Pennsylvania 2½ to 20½ per cent, New England 9 to 29 per cent, and Youngstown 16 to 22 per cent. Birmingham advanced five points to 25 per cent, while Detroit held at 77 per cent.

Steel's price composites are unchanged, the iron and steel index holding at $32.23; finished steel $54 and steel scrap $9.96.

RAIL TROUBLES SEEN AS LONG STANDING

By MERRYLE RUKEYSER

New York, Aug. 20—The recent pessimism toward railroad securities has been somewhat hysterical, for the troubles of the carriers are long standing and have not just recently been revealed.

M. S. Rukeyser

Nevertheless, the estimates of the federal railroad pension law, which is to be challenged in the courts, and of higher costs resulting from requirements have in recent weeks caused discrimination against railroad securities.

Railroad men feel disapointed that the Roosevelt administration has not yet dealt more constructively with the carriers. "I should say that the most helpful thing the federal government could do would be for Congress to desist from piling further burdens and regulations on the railroads," one leading railroad president in the south said to me, in chatting about this question.

Railroad men feel that, despite the intelligent and constructive views expressed by Mr. Roosevelt when he was a candidate for the presidency in his Salt Lake City address on the subject of railroads nothing has been done by Congress in the two sessions which have passed since he became president to translate these policies into remedial legislation.

On the contrary, they point out, the recent session of Congress enacted two additional laws which tend to increase the burdens and regulation of the railroads, one being the pension bill and the other the amendment to the Railroad Labor Act setting up national adjustment boards, and this despite the fact that bills were pending which had met with the approval of most representative business organizations of the country, the Interstate Commerce Commission, Coordinator Eastman and the various labor organizations, designed to equalize to some extent the unfair competition from which the railroads are suffering from other forms of transportation, by conferring upon the Interstate Commerce Commission similar powers of regulation as those they possess and exercise with respect to the railroads.

"A spokesman for the carriers, in commenting on this trend, remarked: "No real effort appeared to be made to enact this measure and other measures, such as the one to amend the fourth section of the act to regulate commerce, into law. It would almost seem that some elements in Congress are bent on the destruction of the railroads under private ownership and operation in order to bring about government ownership."

As to what is basically the matter with the carriers, one outstanding railroad president, in a private discussion, frankly told me:

"Of course, the chief difficulty which is confronting the railroads is the same as that which is confronting most other industries, namely, lack of business. With a restoration of anything like normal traffic conditions all railroads would be in much better position financially and most of them would show reasonably satisfactory earnings. However, the burdens which have ben laid on the railroads through extreme and, to my mind, unnecessary regulation, is not to be minimized, to say nothing of the unfair competitive conditions obtaining with other forms of unregulated and subsidized transportation, including the government itself as a competitor in the operations of the barge lines."

Insurance Stocks Show Firmer Tone

Insurance stocks in the New York City market registered a firmer tone during the past week. The aggregate value of 20 leading fire and casualty insurance issues, according to records compiled by Hoit, Rose & Troster, amounted to $438,902,000 on August 17, compared with $433,134,000 on August 10, an increase of $5,768,000 or 1.33 per cent.

The current average yield of the 20 issues of 4.18 per cent compared with a yield of 4.22 per cent a week ago. The current market value is now 1.14 times the current liquidating value, against 1.12 on August 10. Combined operating earnings from underwriting and net investment income are now 10.48 per cent on market, as compared with 10.61 per cent the week before, and, based on current figures, the 20 issues are now quoted at an average of 9.6 times their combined operating earnings against 9.4 a week ago.

Dollar Closes Up in Paris Dealings

Paris, Aug. 20 (AP)—The United States dollar gained 3½ centimes today, closing at 15.01 francs (6.662 cents to the Franc) as compared with Saturday's unoficial close of 14.975 francs (6.68 cents). The opening quotation today was 14.98 francs (6.677 cents).

SHARES STEADY AS DULLNESS PREVAILS

New York, Aug. 20—The stock market was a dull affair again today as traders held to the sidelines and prices showed little change from Saturday's dull session.

With the exception of United States Smelting in the mining shares trading held in narrow range. U. S. Smelting opened almost two points higher.

United States Steel, Bethlehem and other industrial issues were quiet and generally steady.

Railroad shares attempted to stage a further recovery movement under the leadership of Union Pacific which advanced a point.

Both General Motors and Chrysler were inclined to be dull and somewhat sluggish.

Stocks were steady in exteremely dull first hour dealings with fractional gains scored by a number of leaders, including New York Central, Atchison, Bethlehem Steel, Corn Products, Deere and du Pont.

United Aircraft after getting down to within a small fraction of its year's low on Saturday picked up today to open half a point higher.

Utilities were quiet and generally steady.

Wall Street studied reports of gradual economic recovery on a world-scale with interest. Particular attention was paid to a review by the Foreign Policy Association. Stating "little doubt can remain regarding the existence of a world economic upswing of significant proportions."

Domestic signs of Autumn business expansion were not convincing, although it was considered early for seasonal trade stimulus to become effective.

The magazine "Steel" commented that the continued slackness of steel buying, together with "widespread labor dificulties and increasing uncertainties regarding government policies, is exerting a pronounced depression influence in the markets." It estimated operations last week had dropped 6 points to 21½ per cent of capacity.

The British pound opened at $5.08¾, off ⅛ of a cent. French francs were .00⅛ of a cent lower at 6.66½ cents.

B. & M. NAMES NEW EXECUTIVE

Appointment of Henry F. McCarthy as General Passenger Agent of the Boston and Maine Railroad and the Maine Central Railroad, effective today, was announced last night by President E. S. French.

The appointment, the announcement stated, marks the start of an intensive drive by the two roads in an effort to reclaim lost passenger business. General Passenger Agent Fred T. Grant of the Boston and Maine, and General Passanger Agent Joseph J. Doane of the Maine Central Railroad will continue to serve in those capacities.

The newly appointed General Passenger Agent of the two roads is a native of Portsmouth, N. H., and a graduate of the schools in that city. He brings to his new position not only a wide knowledge of traffic, gained in various fields through an intensive educational study of the transportation problem, but an entire familiarity with northern New England people and northern New England problems.

Among other accomplishments, he won, in country-wide competition, appointment to the Strathcona Fellowship in Transportation at Yale University.

McCarthy was graduated from Harvard College in 1927, and shortly afterward became associated with the Baltimore & Ohio railroad. In 1929, he resigned to continue his studies of traffic problems under the Fellowship he won at Yale. He then became connected with the St. Louis Southern Lines, where until he resigned to take his new position, he was assistant general traffic manager.

Circulation of Money Has Drop

Washington, Aug. 20 (INS)—Money circulation has dropped off more than a half billion dollars since the 1933 peak of $5,849,000,000 reached Dec. 20 of last year, according to figures available at the treasury and federal reserve board.

This despite the fact that in the same period the government had expended $5,208,413,000, including $3,230,180,000 for emergency purposes.

There has been a slight decrease in circulation during the last two weeks due to government expenditures, movement of crops and the vacation season.

L. & N. Railroad Reports Surplus

Louisville & Nashville Railroad reports surplus for six months ended June 30, 1934, of $2,097,052 after taxes and charges, equal to $1.79 a share on 1,170,000 shares, against $623,507 in first half of 1933.

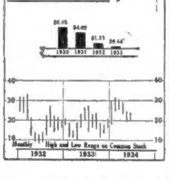
Electric Auto-Lite Has Better Outlook

Analysis Prepared by THE FITCH INVESTORS SERVICE

Earnings in the first quarter amounted to 34 cents a share against nothing in the like 1933 months. Since then company has acquired over 90 per cent of capital stock of Moto Meter Gauge & Equipment Corp., on the basis of one Electric Auto-Lite share for each 2½ Moto Meter common shares. Giving effect to a 100 per cent exchange (effecting issuance of 300,000 ELO shares), earnings for the March quarter were equal to 44 cents a share.



OPENS POSSIBILITIES

Last year, when practically every unit in the automotive accessory field made good gains in sales and income, company was an exception, earnings declining to 44 cents a share, compared with $1.21 in 1932. However, a change appears to have taken place this year, with further gains expected from recent acquisition of Moto Meter. Also, Chrysler's relations with the latter company are expected to result in Electric Auto-Lite getting a larger share of Chrysler's lighting and ignition business.

EXPECT REPLACEMENT DEMAND FOR BATTERIES

Auto-Lite is a leading maker of starting, lighting and ignition equipment; also makes storage batteries, dry cell batteries, welding machines and other items. The company distributes its products to the retail trade through some 3500 service stations. The storage batteries (trade-marked U.S.L., Prest-O-Lite, and Marko) have a seasonal replacement demand in the fall and winter which partially offsets a dull demand of original equipment during these seasons, with two-thirds of the entire volume customarily sold in the four months starting with July.

Through merger of Moto Meter Gauge & Equipment Corp., company will manufacture gauges, meters and other appliances used in connection with automobiles, aircraft, watercraft and machinery of all kinds.

Capitalization consists of: Preferred stock, 7 per cent cum. par $100 (callable at 110), 41,977 shares; Common: ($5 par) 1,161,591 shares. (Also 46,825 common shares held in treasury).

Financial condition as of Dec. 31, 1933, was good, with current ratio 6 to 1, and cash and securities total $1,269,000, compared with current liabilities of $688,000.

Investors Mutual Is Incorpofated

Consumption of Tin Is at New High

Consumption of tin by the tin-plate industry throughout the world amounted to 55,000 tons in the year ended last May, the highest total recorded for a similar period, according to advices received in the Commerce Department. This, it is pointed out, is 5000 tons more than in 1929 and 2500 tons in excess of the peak year 1933.

World consumption of tin during the 1933-34 period amounted to 129,600 tons against 101,765 tons in the corresponding period immediately preceding. The United States increased its consumption of tin from 38,470 tons in the 12 months ended May, 1934, to 58,117 tons in the 1933-34 period, while British consumption advanced from 17,879 tons to 20,112 tons.

Consumption of tin by the world's motor-car industry during the first five months of the current year reached a total of 5700 tons, compared with 3590 tons in the corresponding period of 1933.

The figures cited above are from the July bulletin of the Hague office of the International Tin Research and Development Council, the report points out.

Advertising Volume Up

While the rate of increase in volume of advertising in newspapers has declined somewhat, advertising activity continues at a greater pace than in 1933, according to an analysis of July lineage figures in 77 leading cities prepared by Advertising Age.

Total lineage in newspapers in those cities was 116,877,000 for July, 1934, compared with 109,733,000 for the corresponding month of 1933, a gain of 6.4 per cent. Every classification showed an increase except financial advertising, which registered a loss of aproximately 24.8 per cent from the 1933 figures.

Retail advertising increased 3,730,000 lines to 59,108,000 lines, a gain of 6.7 per cent. General advertising gained per cent, totaling 21,727,000 lines, and automotive advertising climbed to 9,671,000 lines, a gain of 1,354,000 lines. This was an increase of 16.3 per cent, the largest recorded by any classification.

Classified advertising, which is regarded as a good index of employment activity, also showed a slight gain, increasing 807,000 lines to 19,633,000, a gain of 4.3 per cent.

Magazine advertising also continues to rise. Advertising Age reports. July figures for 102 publications registering a gain of 30.6 per cent compared with July, 1933. The total for the month was 1,348,000 lines, an increase of 316,000.

U. S. Gypsum Makes Gain

Notwthstanding that United States Gypsum Co. now is in the midst of the usual summer lull in business, prospects for the second half year at present look somewhat brighter than they did a year ago for the comparable 1933 period.

Should operation and administration of the Federal Housing Law in the next two months stimulate a large volume of remodeling and repairing in addition to the increase in residential and semipublic construction thus far noted this year, both volume and profits to U. S. G. might show improvement over the first half as was the case last year.

For six months ended June 30 the company reported net income of $1,141,668 after charges, equal after preferred dividends to 73 cents a share on the common, against $831,541, or 47 cents a share on common in first half of 1933. For the full year 1933 net income amounted to $1,738,927, or $1 a share on the common after preferred dividends. This indicates that in the second half of 1933 company's net profit amounted to more than $907,000.

Gen. Am. Trans. Gets Big Order

B. T. Babbitt Co., maker of cleansing compounds, has ordered "dry-flo" tank cars from General American Transportation Co. This is the largest fleet of this type of car yet to be adopted by a single company since it was first introduced by the company in 1931.

The "dry-flo" car does away with labor in unloading and practically eliminates labor in loading. The Babbitt Co. will use the cars to haul special silica sand from southern New Jersey to their plant at Albany, N. Y.

7000 Freight Car Order

In shops at Harrisburg, Altoona and Pittsburgh, on fabrication of 7000 new freight cars, under PWA improvement program, at the peak of 2501 men were employed. Present weekly payroll is $60,000. Of the total order 4972 cars have been completed.

More than 147,000 tons of steel and 16,600,000 feet of lumber are required for car construction. Hundreds of additional men are engaged in construction of 28 electric passenger locomotives.

ACTIVITY DOWN IN DETROIT

Industrial activity in July continued the decline apparent in June, partly because many plants were closed part or all of the first week, but still remained substantially above July, 1933, says Detroit board of commerce.

August outlook is clouded by pattern makers' strike, delaying activities of foundries, special machinery, tool and die shops. Such shops are ordinarily well started on new model automobile work by latter part of August.

July survey covering 29 representative industrial concerns found 13 reporting declines from June, 12 had no change, and four showed increases. Four firms expect increases in August, 11 no change, nine declines, and five are uncertain as to the probable August trend.

CORPORATE TAX IS RAISED

Corporation franchise tax of Louisiana was increased to $1.50 per $1000 of capital stock from $1.25 by a special session of the legislature.

A bill was also passed authorizing municipalities to levy a tax of 1 per cent on newspaper and motion picture advertising when the circulation of newspapers is 20,000 or more a week. At the last regular session the state imposed a 2 per cent tax on newspaper advertising.

The income tax act passed at the regular session was made to appply to the year 1934 and the kerosene tax law was amended to include lamp oil, tractor fuel, distillate burning oil, stove oil, coal oil, furnace oil, or any other oil of a similar name.

Secretary of Agriculture Wallace opposed the economic feasibility of American ship subsidies as a means of increasing our export trade. In a letter to Chairman Bland, D., Va., of the House merchant marine committee, he said:

"Any further governmental encouragement of the shipping industry by subsidy or similar measures would tend to divert the energies of our people in some degree into shipping as compared with other industries."

MAD MILLIONS---By Charles Grant

SYNOPSIS

Jasper Ingram, wealthy promoter, takes his secretary, lovely Cathleen McCarthy, to his "Grangelands" estate so he can transact business while attending the charity garden party given by his wife, Laura. Cathleen, the sole support of a large family, is fascinated by the surrounding luxury and wishes she could attend the party. Marian Alspaugh, the gold-digging wife of Homer Alspaugh, Ingram's confidential secretary, is cigarette girl at the fete. She flirts with the Marques d'Alhues, Mrs. Ingram's special guest.

Seward, Ingram's son, is infatuated with Arline Martin, an actress, but the ruthless Arline—realizing the senior Ingram could be more helpful in furthering her career—tries to impress the latter. Later, he calls at her apartment to listen to the reading of a play, the success of which means the arrival of herself and its author—the man she really loves. Failing to interest Ingram in the play, Arline tries to win him over by flirting boldly with him just as Seward arrives.

The boy leaves in anger. Next day, at the office, Ingram tries to explain to his son, but the latter refuses to listen, referring to his father's other affairs. Cathleen hesitates making an appointment with Seward because of their social difference. He, however, is persistent and she finally acquiesces. Marian bored with the humdrum existence she leads with Alspaugh, goes out with Marques d'Alhues who professes his love for her.

CHAPTER XII

Millicent Hinshaw wondered what was the matter with Seward. She sat on the sand of Grangefields' beach under a striped umbrella, leaning back on her hands so her pretty brown legs stretched out into the sun and nearly touching the gloomy Seward.

She wore a scarlet bathing suit and a little red cap. Last year, a debutante, she had been greatly admired, but no one in whom she could take the slightest interest had fallen in love with her. With three unmarried sisters, she knew perfectly that she should work quickly, but she did not know how to go about it, having a phlegmatic temperament and the strong sense of her own dignity which had won Laura Ingram's approval. Still she did her best.

"Isn't it just too sweet of your mother to give me a dance?" she said.

NEW CURIOSITY

Invitations to entertainment at Graingefield, in Millicent's honor were already out.

"Mother likes nothing better than throwing a party," said Seward. "You make a good excuse. It's too bad I never had a sister, mother'd get such a kick out of running a daughter!"

"Some day you'll give her a daughter," Millicent observed sedately.

As Seward didn't answer, she added hopefully, "If your mother had a daughter, she'd be a very lucky girl." From the boy this won only a discouraging grunt.

Millicent, finding her conversational powers failing, decided to make herself attractive by withdrawal, and exclaiming, "I'm going to have another dip," she ran gracefully down the beach.

Seward continued to lie still with his elbows in the sand his chin propped on his hands, thinking about that girl whose face was haunting him. He was going to see her tonight, give her a large evening. After that almost anything might happen.

He had never been greatly excited about girls, until his pseudo affair with Arline Martin. Badly as that turned out, it left him with a new curiosity about women.

The whole business of love, he decided, was a matter of give and take. Naturally, he wasn't considering marriage with a little Irish stenographer, so it seemed best to e her a substntial present to t and let her infer, from the t, the nature of his intentions. rriving in town about 4 o'clock, ard went straight to Tiffany's. a bracelet were to be the price a girl's honor, it should be a tty good bracelet, he argued.

So, at his request, the clerk proced some sapphire and platinum ircles, ranging from twenty-five hundred to twenty-five thousand dollars. Even the cheapest of these struck Seward as excessive. He finally selected a pretty bracelet set with sapphires at nine hundred and fifty dollars, gave his check for t, and took it away.

CATHLEEN IS HAPPY

Cathleen, though she had worked ard all day, emerged from the Ingram building, looking as fresh as a wood-nymph. Her dress was cornflower blue, and her hat was the one Seward had approved. He opened the door of his car for her and they smiled into each other's eyes as she got in.

"Where are we going?" she asked, but without waiting for an answer continued: "Hasn't it been a hot day? Of course, it's always cool in your father's offices. I often think how lucky I am to work there."

He told her where they were going, a yacht club in the East Fifties, and when they arrived, Cathleen was delighted with it. They had tea at a window overlooking the East River across which purple shadows were stealing as the sun sank below the tall buildings behind them.

Seward, strangely, found it hard make the conversation take quite the course he had planned. He should, according to the code, be leaning over the table paying the girl daring, insidious compliments, brushing her hand with his, touching her knee, looking suggestively into her eyes. Instead, it was she who led the talk in the intervals of drinking three cups of tea, chosen by her in preference to cocktails urged on her by the boy.

"Will you be coming into your father's office soon, Mr. Ingram?" she asked.

"Maybe I'll do something else," he said vaguely. "Lately, I've thought I'd like to get away from New York—be an explorer, join a scientific expedition, or the like."

"That'd be great fun, but I'm thinking Mr. Ingram will be wanting you with him."

Seward told her flatly that she was wrong there.

"I've had a scrap with father. We had a row the day I talked to you at the office. He was so mad I thought maybe he'd kick me out. If he did, I'd be like you. I'd have to make my own way."

Why was he telling her this? It wasn't a bit the line he had mapped out. He had seen himself getting this little stenographer all hot and bothered with his determined and seductive advances. Facing her candid blue gaze, he found this difficult—and a little preposterous.

"With all this unemployment, mobs of applicants for every job, I wonder how I'd make out myself," he said. "Could I get a job, do you think, all on my own?"

JOBS DISCUSSED

Alert, interested, Cathleen considered the question. "You could get a job," she said with calm finality. "But it wouldn't be fair, because you don't need it, and there aren't enough jobs to go around. You'd get it because you're younger, healthier, better educated than the man who'd be turned out to make room for you. You're well-dressed and sure of yourself.

"Now take my brother, Joe—he's about your age. He always said he couldn't get a job and it was no use looking for one. I told you he went to work yesterday, thanks to Mr. Ingram. But I know he could have got one sooner, by trying. I shall die of shame if he doesn't make good. It was so kind of your father to say a word for him, just because he's my brother!"

"Nice to you, is he?" asked Seward with careful carelessness.

"He's wonderful," she cried. "Always pleasant and considerate."

"He would be," said Seward.

"Well, everybody isn't . . . Lots of bosses think working people are just machines."

Seward, beginning to feel a little uncomfortable, said hastily, "We didn't come out to solve the world's problems. Let's dance."

They danced, forgetting social injustices, until they felt hungry again, and then they drove across town to another place, glamorous to Cathleen, and had dinner and then went to see the current musical show.

While the curtain was up, Cathleen, unspoiled by many shows, forgot the boy at her side and sat wide eyed, lost in a world of make believe. Seward, too sophisticated to be deeply impressed, looked at her lovely profile and struggled to readjust his ideas about her.

Dimly it began to dawn on him that this girl could not be bought . . . He had never before had more than a bowing acquaintance with a business girl, but he had heard stories about beautiful stenographers of whom wives were jealous, of evening and summer frolics, and he had started with the rich man's easy assumption that money will not be denied.

Throughout this evening he had been slowly becoming aware of a quality in Cathleen McCarthy that was not reconcilable with his hastily-formed plans.

She was in high spirits now. But her exuberance resembled not the froth on a cheap liquor, but the sparkle of a gem turned to the light, th leaping colors in the sapphires he had bought for her. She had honor and independence and a serious outlook. If she had few illusions about life, she had the strength and courage to face facts.

Now that he knew her better, now that the turgid feelings stirred by Arline no longer clouded his judgment, Seward found that he couldn't picture this girl accepting costly gfts from him or meeting him for clandestine weekends out of town.

Yet hadn't he thought the same thing about Arline? Had he learned nothing from that experience? A girl could look angelic, untouchable, and yet sell out; there was the lesson he should have by heart—and he had almost forgotten it!

WILD KIND OF PLACE

After the theater Seward had meant to make a round of the night clubs, dancing, drinking, to a late hour. Cathleen let him take her to the first place on his list, but it was obvious she didn't care for it. The place was full of smoke and blare and jigging rhythm, and the little table they found was elbowed much too closely by other tables.

"What'll you have? The Scotch here's fine—or would you rather have champagne? This place gets good early. We'll go uptown later on."

"It must be pretty late already!" she exclaimed. "I thought we'd be having some ice-cream—nothing more, surely, so late as this. What a wild kind of place this is, with no air in it to breathe!"

"If you smoked yourself you wouldn't notice the air. You ought to learn to smoke. Go on, try this—"

He passed her the cigarette he had just lighted for himself, and Cathleen, feeling that she had been a little ungracious about the night club, put it between her lips and drew on it as he directed.

"There is little danger of my getting to care for it—" she said, wrinkling her nose and blowing the smoke out hastily. "I can't see where the attraction lies. It only chokes and tickles. If you don't mind, I won't go farther with this, Mr. Ingram, for here comes my ice cream."

"If you don't want it, I'll finish it," Seward said, and Cathleen thought that nothing was more curious than the minor economies of the very rich . . .

"Now I must be going," she said when she had finished her ice cream. "You've given me a wonderful evening."

There remained the drive home, for this time Seward refused to deposit her at the subway. The air outside was cool and almost sweet, after the thick clogging atmosphere they had left. They drove across the Queensborough Bridge, almost empty now, and through miles of unfamiliar and unimpressive streets of Long Island City. The McCarthys' house, when at last they stopped before it, showed not a single lighted window, for Cathleen had exacted her mother's promise, before coming out, that she would not wait up for her.

In the next instalment read how Seward presents Cathleen with an exquisite bracelet, which she intends to return, but the gift strangely disappears.

You Hear Her on the Radio

GERTRUDE BERG

Gertrude Berg . . . Known to you as Mollie . . . Over the radio . . . Because Gertrude is the Mollie . . . In "The Rise of the Goldbergs" . . . As well as being originator of the poular opus . . . And the author.

Here is another native New Yorker . . . Born in Manhattan . . . Schooled in Manhattan . . . Colleged in Manhattan . . . Married in Manhattan . . . A mother in Manhattan twice . . . And a radio success in Manhattan . . . As well as elsewhere . . . With not a Manhattan Transfer apparent . . . Except within the boundaries.

Just 31 is Gertrude . . . Or Mollie . . . Or Mrs. Lewis Berg . . . If you wish the exact present status and title . . . And during those years she has closely observed her personalities . . . Depicted in the sketch which she writes . . . And helps in acting out.

Her schooling was in upper Manhatten . . . And she went through Columbia . . . All as Gertrude Edelstein . . . daugter of a small hotel keeper.

Even while at Columbia she began to write . . . Mainly sketches . . . But had little success until she conceived "The Rise of the Goldbergs" . . . And even then she had small success at first . . . But kept knocking at studio doors until given a chance.

The show finally was given an audition . . . But the author insisted that it be produced as she wanted it . . . Which included herself in the cast . . . As Mollie . . . And a carefully selected group of Broadway stage people . . . In support.

Its hit was almost instantaneous . . . Once it went on the air . . . And Gertrude has written every show . . . And acted in it . . . This being part of her idea of happiness . . . With the other part marriage and a family.

Her husband is a sugar technologist . . . And they have two children . . . Cherney, the 11-year-old son . . . And Harriet . . . The seven-year-old daughter . . . But despite her family and her writing Gertrude still has time to dance . . . And paint pictures . . . At which she is also accomplished.

Georgie Price on Feature Program

By N. F. T.

Irene Wicker

Those versatile Princess Pat Players in their weekly dramatization tonight will air the three-act love comedy "Doubled Barreled Love," written by Gordon Saint Clair. It is a comedy with a lot of crackle and shows what can happen to a mild mannered professor when he gets in dutch with an athletic he-man over a girl. A peculiar feature of the presentation is that a parrot, imitated by Doug Hope, will have a great deal to do with the straightening out of the tangled love affairs of two pairs of sweethearts. Other leading roles taken by the Princess Pat Players are Vincent Coleman as the professor, Irene Wicker as Barbara, Joan Blaine as her cousin, Julia, and Arthur Jacobson as Tim Brandt. The program will be aired (WBZ) from 9:30 to 10.

Two famous air wave bands will make their appearances at the Metropolitan Theater within the next three weeks. Both Fred Waring and his Pennsylvanians and Ozzie Nelson and his band with Harriett Hilliard heading the revue will arrive in Boston for a week each. Ozzie will play the week of September 7 and Fred a week before that. As both bands are excellent radio and stage performers it will be interesting to see which draws the larger crowd.

Georgie Price will again be the feature star tonight (WNAC) from 9:30 to 10:00 on the "Summer Interlude" program with Lud Gluskin and his Continental Orchestra. Also on the airing will be Henrietta Schumann, the concert pianist, who will play her own arrangement of one or more of the familiar classical works. Among the tunes played in the European manner by Lud and the band will be "I Only Have Eyes for You," "Command to Love" and "Two Cigarettes in the Dark."

* * *

Murder and extortion will be the themes in tonight's episode (WNAC) of Raffles—the Amateur Cracksman, to be aired from 8:30 to 9:00 under the subtitle of "The Adventure of the Lion and the Hare." Frederick Worlock will again star as the gentleman adventurer and Kirby Hawkes will act as Raffles' friend, Bunny Gaston.

Best Tomorrow

7 to 8 A. M.—WBZ—Regular musical clock novelty hour, furnishing the correct time at five-minute intervals throughout.

8 A. M.—WBZ—Religious period of "Morning Devotionals," with spiritual offerings in words and music.

11 A. M.—WAAB—Weekly fashion outline by Annice Brink, presented under Boston Evening American auspices.

So hold tight to your armchairs, you ether listeners, for tonight's scene is sure to be packed with thrills and upsets.

John F. McNamara, one of New England's ace announcers, was recently named program manager of WBZ-WBZA to fill the vacancy on the staff created by the resignation of John L. Clark. Concurrent with the announcement was the naming of John H. Wright, widely-known production expert, to the program department staff to assist McNamara.

Now We Can Start That Bridge Club

"We were as scattered as the four winds.

"It wasn't much use trying to organize a bridge club, spending most of our time going back and forth.

"But last night I rented the cutest apartment you ever saw. Found it advertised in the American. It's so convenient to everything, and now we'll be near enough to each other to get our bridge club started."

Yes . . . convenience is a great thing in these days of speed and action. And you'll find an apartment, home or room convenient to your business, your friend's house, your favorite theater or golf club . . . just what you want . . . through American and Advertiser Rentals. Let Barbara Holmes of the American-Advertiser R. H. White Co. Free Rental Bureau show you some of the photographs of vacancies, in and around Boston, now on view.

R. I. RUM RAIDS BRING 'PEACE'

Providence, Aug. 20—Lieutenant Detective William E. Murray, police department "sledgehammerman" in pre-prohibition-repeal days, was back—very much sub-rosa—today on his old job of keeping liquor sales throughout the city in more definite conformance with Rhode Island's none-too-strict alcohol beverage statute.

Transfer of Murray from his regular headquarters detective bureau post was not officially announced. The word, however, of a strenuously tightened enforcement of tavern and restaurant regulations was being passed along among establishments which have been conspicuously lax in law observance.

Serving of liquor to minors, serving of liquor to intoxicated persons, and serving of liquor on Sundays without food are among the allegedly common, illegal practices which are now due to attract stern attention of Providence's Public Safety board, which is under legislative probe.

All along the city's dining and wining front, in consequence, business today was being carried on in circumspect and law abiding fashion.

Our Public Schools Must Be Kept Up

IT is a grave reflection upon American Government that it should have sacrificed public education during the current depression while squandering public money on the upkeep of thousands upon thousands of useless politicians.

Never before during an economic crisis, declares Dr. Edgar W. Kr ht, professor of education at the University of North Carolina, has public educational opportunity been restricted instead of being enlarged.

"During the past century the United States has had a dozen or more well-marked economic crises," Dr. Knight shows in the handbook on "Our Public Schools," recently published by the National Congress of Parents and Teachers.

The records for the present depression show that public expenditures for other purposes have been FAR OUT OF PROPORTION to those made for public schools.

WITHIN the year 100,000 children have been denied the educational opportunity that is their birthright by the new closings of schools because of lack of funds.

School terms have been shortened, teachers' salaries have been declining, thousands of teachers have gone unpaid for months and months, and several hundred thousand certificated public school teachers reduced to the ranks of the jobless.

Meantime, the cost of government has been going up. The number of governmental offices has been increasing, thousands upon thousands of POLITICIANS have been ADDED TO THE PAYROLLS of Federal, State and local governments.

This desperate condition cannot continue without weakening the whole structure of the government of the Constitution. Public education is the very foundation of the American system of government.

The whole American advance has been based upon the American system of public education.

We cannot as a nation sacrifice public education without putting our democratic system of government in jeopardy.

We cannot surrender our democracy without succumbing to despotism.

And to save our Democracy, we must support our system of public education.

In every state where elections are held this year—all forty-eight states will elect representatives in Congress and thirty-five states will elect governors—the people ought to demand an administration of government that will give them more and better public schools for the training of citizens, and FEWER POLITICIANS for the people to support AT THE PUBLIC TROUGH.

Paying the Fiddler

Liability totalling about $1,500,000 has been assessed against various directors and ex-directors of Beacon Participations, Inc.

This shows the teeth in the history-making ruling handed down by young Judge John J. Burns a year ago when he held that the director of a corporation, who causes loss to a stockholder because of his negligence or bad faith, is liable to that stockholder.

There are few stock flotations in these days, but this decision should act as a curb on promoters in some future market boom.

It should put an end to high pressure methods and put a premium on level-headed, honest sanity in the money marts. It should give the "poor fish" a chance.

The fearlessness of Judge Burns in ruling against the 1928-29 school of financiers has, in the meantime, brought its reward. Next month he goes to Washington as counsel for the new National Securities Administration.

'Expect Unexpected'

Supervisor John M. Young of the Fall River Bureau of Registrar Morgan T. Ryan's office says:

> "The ability to anticipate the unexpected is the primary difference between a good and a bad driver."

It sounds as if Mr. Young were asking a good deal when he would have us expect the unexpected, but a moment's thought will show what's meant.

For example, if a driver ahead of you signals he or she is going to go in one direction, remember that he MAY do the opposite.

If you expect a pedestrian to keep on walking across the street, keep in mind the thought that he or she MAY decide suddenly to stand still.

If you are a good driver, the chances are that the bad driver and the pedestrian with poor judgment will go on repeating their errors until they encounter someone who isn't good at the wheel.

Farmers Get More

Much has been said in recent weeks about the plight of the good farmer.

Standard Statistics estimates farm income for the United States for 1934 will reach $8,250,000,000. This is more than 29 per cent above the total of the previous year.

The basis of the forecast are government estimates of the quantity of production and either recent prices or the average for 1934 to date, depending upon the methods of marketing.

The estimate does not take into account the possibility of higher prices for farm products. And this exists.

Noiseless Firemen

Remember when Joe Penner sang:

> "I'm a bell-ringing, axe-swinging, humdinging fire-fighting man!"

Somehow most of us are apt to associate the brave lads of the fire department with noise—sirens and excitement.

And we are still inclined to think Chief Charles A. Donohue and the men of Ladder 5 and Engine 16 of Roslindale have set something like a precedent.

For Fire Commissioner Edward F. McLaughlin has commended them for "noiseless work." It transpires they put out a fire on Aug. 6 with such quietness that a woman in poor health, asleep on the second floor, was not even awakened.

Seriously, that IS good work.

Listen, World! -:- By Elsie Robinson

"NO MATTER WHAT HAPPENS WE HAVE EACH OTHER!"

Often, these days, I'm wondering—just as you are—what'll happen next . . . where we're all heading . . . and on what we can count in this strange blind passage.

Elsie Robinson

And a queer fright comes over me. As if everything had been swept away, and I were left alone in a dark and ruined world. Then, suddenly, out of the past, comes comfort. It begins with a picture—

A picture of the old house where I lived as a girl . . . of the "sitting-room" where we all gathered in the evening. A shabby room, with the cheap paint peeling from the tongue-and-groove woodwork, and the matting ravelling in a dozen places. In summer the windows opened wide to the tangled garden, and the roses came spraying in through broken screens . . . and with the sleepy sound of the crickets and night birds, and the distant sigh and suck of the turning tide.

In winter, Dad put up the stove, and we could see the flame, leaping and twisting through the square of isingless.

CROWDED ROOM

There was a long extension table—do you remember?—a "chenille cover." A faded tan affair—with knotted tassels that we youngsters pulled out, and ink spots from our "homework."

What a crowded room it was on winter nights, with the rain pattering on the roof and all of us talking at once, and that mixed-up home smell of stove blacking, apple peeling, drying rubbers, winter flannels and doughnuts.

And always the faint blueness of dad's old pipe, circling around the big kerosene lamp, losing itself in the shadows of the ceiling. A crowded room and a happy one—

And then, one night, I realized with a shock that it was a poor room, too. Strange, how youngsters can live in the very core of struggle and sacrifice and yet know nothing of it. It was that way with us.

They must have been desperately worried, always—those two who were such weary, anxious human beings to themselves, but only Mother and Dad to us five children. And I suppose that particular night was not much worse than all the rest, to them. But for me, it was my first realization of grown-up fear and grown-up need . . .

I think a bill had come. A much worse bill than they expected and, for a moment, they couldn't hide their panic. I remember lifting my head from my book—startled by some strangeness—and seeing their faces staring at each other through the blue shadows, white and tense.

ALONE IN WORLD

And suddenly, just such a feeling as comes over me these days, fell upon me, a feeling as though all the homely security that walled my life had been swept away and I were alone in a dreadful world which I had never seen before.

It was so sharp and shocking, that sudden desolation, I started to scream with fright. I remember my mouth opening—as one remembers fumbling in a nightmare.

Then something happened. Very quietly—though he stooped as if he were tired—my father rose from his chair and went around to my mother and put his scarred hand on her shoulder and smiled down into her desperate, staring eyes.

"No matter what happens, Lizzie," he said softly, "we have each other, dear."

She smiled . . . and laid her cheek upon his hand. And suddenly I was back there—safe and happy in the little room I loved. And everything was all right.

And so it comes back to me often, these days, when that sudden desolation comes over me . . . and all the things we have known and loved and clung to seem swept away . . . and I reach out in terror for something, for anything, to cling to—

Out of the lost years, up from the secret depths of my heart, those gentle words rise, once again, to comfort me—

"No matter what happens, we have each other, dear."

Only now, it is not my father speaking to my mother. It is my spirit speaking to your spirit. Here we are in the darkness you and I—staring at each other—facing trouble we cannot measure or define, knowing not what may be waiting for us outside the rim of shadows.

There is nothing we can say . . . nothing we can do . . . and everything seems lost.

But it isn't. For we have each other. I have never seen you. You have never seen me. But suddenly we know we are part of each other . . . and that we're standing by each other . . . and that as long as we have each other, we'll win through somehow, dear.

The Red-Cheeked Girl -:- -:- -:- By Winifred Black

Winifred Black

The hall table was piled high with telegrams. Messages from close friends all over the world. Statesmen and artists and singers and writers and policemen and firemen and cooks, yes and even waiters—for the celebrity was one of those human beings who have the gift of being loved.

The porch of the great house was full of anxious friends—they talked in whispers and watched the faces of the arriving and departing doctors with eager scrutiny.

He didn't think he was going to die—the celebrity.

He thought he was just a little tired, that's all, and he loved to close his eyes and see again the little path that led through the woods to the little red school house on the hill.

IN CHARGE NOW

He was a little worried about his arithmetic test and he did hope that teacher would be good humored about it.

And the little red-cheeked girl who always sat in the seat in front of him—her arithmetic would be all right—she always stood at the head of the class, but anyhow he could run faster than she and swim better, too, and he was very glad of that, for somehow it was very important to have the little red-cheeked girl admire him.

Downstairs in the cool library the little red-cheeked girl was sitting—for she didn't sit very long to be sure!

A busy person, the little red-cheeked girl, servants to watch, telephones to listen in, people to send away—it is no joke having a sick celebrity for your husband.

And it was all so tiresome this fuss they were making about a poor, foolish fellow who never would learn how to save money, and who threw away bank notes as if they were so much blank paper.

She would see to that now—and she did.

No pots of hot coffee for the nurses or the doctors either. No supper at midnight for anyone, she got on without a midnight supper, why shouldn't they.

HER WAYS NOT HIS

And the old friends who were so persistent, what joy it was to send them away with a little tight mouthed smile—they had always tried to monopolize him—they came between her and her husband.

And all at once those close about the dying man—understood his strange look of tense endurance.

Perhaps it would have been better for a little red-cheeked girl if she had never grown up and married the celebrity, for his ways were not her ways, and she could never make him walk happily in the narrow little path she loved to tread.

She could not take him for what he was and love him and forgive him, and smile at his boyish exuberance.

And he—ah, well, he is free now to go his own friendly, boyish way, and if I were close to him in love and friendship I should not be sorry.

I always hate to see the mark of the collar on the neck of even a dog.

WHIP-POOR-WILL

At times when summer nights are still
There shrieks the strident whip-poor-will,
And what the clamor's all about
Mankind has yet to figure out.

I wonder as I hear that sound
If eerie phantoms prowl around
And whip-poor-wills contrive that way
To keep the ghosts of cats away.

Out of the darkness sharp and shrill
Comes that incessant "whip-poor-will!"
That cannot be a song of glee
Or much more restful it would be.

No sign of danger can be seen
And yet that frenzied bird appears
To voice a multitude of fears.

O whip-poor will, I would I knew
Why strangely God has fashioned you
Down through the ages with the night

Human Side of the News; The Comstock Lode

By Edwin C. Hill

With silver up in price and again, to a limited extent, back of the paper dollar, and the old silver camps of the West awakening from their long sleep, George D. Lyman's new book on the boom days in Virginia City and the romance of the great Comstock Lode makes timely, lively reading.

For "The Sage of the Comstock Lode" (Charles Scribner's Sons), written by one who was born in Virginia City in the early eighties and grew up among the still warmly breathing traditions of the thrilling boom days, revives the whole exciting, colorful epoch in the development of the West.

BIG SILVER RUSH

The Comstock Lode stretched its opulent length straight through Virginia City from north to south, and during the Sixties every mine along it was hard at work.

Its real discoverers, the two Grosch brothers, died from the hardships of the desert and the mountains before they could exploit its riches, but shortly after their deaths it was discovered that the curious blue rock was choked with rich silver running up to $5000 a ton at the assayer's.

Whereupon the stampede began. As Dr. Lyman writes, all California rang with the call. The mountain roads were jammed with the silver-mad, bound for Sun Mountain. It was the greatest exodus since the days of '49, ten years before.

There were flocks of sheep and herds of cattle in the rush. There were organ grinders grinding out music, Bacchanalian dancing and singing, hallooing and shouting, cursing and reviling. Many were men of means. Some were "bummers." But as a whole they were the pick of California, the pick of the Forty-Niners, the pick of America. The majority were of the Anglo-Saxon race, or from New England, with plentiful offscouring from the Mississippi River brakes.

The most pitiless tyrant would have hesitated to exile his enemies into that sublimity of desolation. But in they flowed, that company of adventurers, Stewart, MacKay, Flood, Fair, OBrien, Terry, Montague and thousands of others, sliding, slipping, rolling over rocks and stumbling over sagebrush, down into the Valley of the Carson to pile up wealth and a wonder city of the times.

Virginia City grew shortly to be the livest town for its age and population that America had ever produced.

Every person reckoned himself a millionaire actual or potential. There were military companies, brass bands, banks, hotels, theaters, hurdy-gurdy houses, wide-open gambling palaces, civic processions, street fights, murders, inquests, riots, saloons every fifteen steps, a dozen breweries, half a dozen jails and some idle talk of building a church.

Samuel L. Clemens was there, and saw it all as a reporter and city editor of the Virginia City Enterprise. It was there, indeed, that he first used the writing name by which the whole world came to know him—Mark Twain.

BOOM DAYS STORY

If you want an account of the silver boom days, of Virginia City when it was ripping and roaring with life, of the Comstock Lode and of the whole high fever of its existence, read his "Roughing It," for nobody is going to beat that slambang description of the whoop and scramble and general hell-raisingness of Virginia City in the early Sixties which the incomparable Mark Twain gave us in that old classic.

There were more mines than miners. These were nearly all wildcat mines and worthless, but nobody believed it then.

Prices rose and fell to the roar of the half-mad populace. Every man had his pockets full of stock, and even gave a few shares to a friend as one gives cigars. Mr. Stewart, later Senator Stewart of Nevada, offered Mark Twain twenty-five feet of his Justis Mine stock if Mark would take the trouble to walk over to his office.

It was then worth five to ten dollars a foot. But Reporter Twain asked Stewart to hold the offer over until the next day. Stewart said he couldn't be in town the next day, and Mark let it go at that. The price went rapidly to $150 a foot.

The first twenty-six graves in the Virginia City cemetery were occupied by men who died with their boots on. But all, or nearly all, were brave, reckless men, killing principally among themselves, traveling with their lives in their hands.

'One House Legislature' Nebraska Plan

By James T. Williams, Jr.

One of the advantages of the American system of government is the opportunity it affords for each state in the Union to become a political experimental station. This enables one state to share with the other forty-seven states the lessons learned by such experimentation.

Of interest to her sister states is an experiment in government which will come before the people of Nebraska for approval at the November elections. They will vote upon a proposed amendment to their state constitution which, if adopted, would establish a state legislature of one chamber, limit membership to between 30 to 50 members, nominated and elected on non-partisan tickets. They would be paid not a nominal but a substantial salary—one large enough to attract men of character and competency to offer themselves for legislative service.

NORRIS BACKS PLAN

Although he is not the author of this legislative proposal, Senator Norris, the father of the "lame duck" amendment to the federal constitution which abolished the short session of Congress, has enthusiastically endorsed it. He is credited with obtaining most of the one hundred thousand signatures to the petition which put this amendment on the ballot.

A state legislature consisting of one chamber and not more than 50 members would reduce the cost of government to the people of Nebraska. It would give them a working body, chosen primarily for their personal qualifications and without regard to their political affiliation. If the experiment succeeded in Nebraska it would doubtless be adopted by other states.

The fact that the people of Nebraska have, on their own initiative, placed such a proposal on the ballot offers another encouraging sign of the stiffening determination of the people all over the country to reduce the cost and raise the standard of state and local government by reducing the number of politicians on the payroll.

Although county government has been described as "the dark continent of American politics" and local government in many states might with equal truth be called "the dismal swamp" of American politics, there is lots of room for improvement in the organization of state governments.

PORK BARREL METHODS

In state after state today public money is being squandered on the upkeep of two or three times the number of executive departments that are necessary to the efficient conduct of the public business.

And the more than three thousand county governments which the people throughout the union are taxed to support could with advantage be reduced to three hundred. County government in metropolitan areas is a useless expense to the people.

It is kept alive by pork barrel politicians who fill its useless offices with their political heelers. County government outside metropolitan areas can be modernized by consolidation and by the transfer to the state of many functions now delegated to county government.

To bring about these reforms in the obsolete system of county and local government that has come down from the days of the ox cart, constitutional amendments are necessary in most of the states. Even where the modernizing of county government is within the power of the Legislature, the county political rings have such a grip on the government of the state that it is hard to get county reorganization measures through both Houses of a State Legislature.

In spite of these obstacles, public sentiment seems to be forcing governors and Legislatures in an increasing number of states to consider ways and means of reducing the cost and raising the standard of state government and of modernizing the system of county and local government.

There seems to be a growing realization of the fact that these reforms must be resorted to if the people are to be given what with increasing determination they are demanding North, East, South and West:

Fewer politicians to feed at the public trough and more and better public schools, served by better trained and better paid teachers to train the citizens of tomorrow.

EYES ON NEBRASKA

If the people of Nebraska vote next November to consolidate their Legislature into a single body, the people of other states will be encouraged to carry that consolidating process into the field of county and local government.

In this way "old economies will supplant new taxes," and government of the people, by the people, for the people will overthrow government of the politicians, by the politicians, for the politicians.
